SOLDIERS GO; MAY BE BACK NEXT SUMMER

Evacuation Movements To Take Place Through Twin Cities

SECTION GOOD SITE

More Than Million Men May Be In Louisiana In 1942, Source Says

The soldiers are leaving—but they may be back.

As transportation and traffic regulation officials of this area prepared Monday for the evacuation this week of thousands of men and animals and tons of military equipment from Louisiana following completion of the largest mock war games in the history of the country, military sources here indicated that more than a million men may take part in Louisiana maneuvers next summer, unless, by that time, the war games have given way to real combat.

Beginning Tuesday morning, the Twin Cities will see six rail movements of units of the maneuver forces and an as yet undetermined number of vehicular unit movements.

Evacuation of the air base at Selman field already had begun Monday and the last units were expected to leave some time later in the week, officers at the base said.

All of the air units at the base had left Monday morning, with the Eighth Bombardment squadron leaving Sunday afternoon for Savannah, Ga., and the two marine air squadrons taking off Monday morning for their base at Quantico, Va.

The ground echelon of the bombardment squadron left Monday morning by motor convoy and the ground echelons of the marine units will leave here by train at 8:30 p.m. Monday over the Illinois Central railroad.

With the departure of the two ground echelons Monday night, approximately 300 men, members of Company C of the 21st Infantry and members of the air base detachment will be left at the field, base officials said.

City and state police here said that they had received no notice of the movement of vehicle units through the Twin Cities.

Details of the troop movement, approximately 98 per cent of which will be performed by the Fourth Corp area quartermaster, Brigadier General James L. Frink, were completed last week-end by Captain Marion L. Bozardt, rail transportation officer on General Frink's staff, in conference with railroad officials.

Units which will pass through here on the Missouri Pacific railroad, their strength, and time of arrival include:

Sixty-seventh Armored Regiment, Second Battalion, 5 officers, 101 men.

NYE SUPPORTS PROFIT LIMIT

North Dakotan Also Favors Establishing Control Over Wages

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Qualified support for Secretary Morgenthau's proposal to limit corporate profits to 6 per cent came today from Senator Nye, Republican North Dakota, one of the administration's most insistent critics on foreign policy.

Nye, who headed the senate committee which investigated profits in the last war, told reporters that "there will come a time when it will take more than a 6 per cent limitation on corporation profits to satisfy the people that the tax load is fair."

But, the North Dakotan asserted, any effort to take away defense profits should be coupled with safeguards providing some control over wage, and production costs.

"We have got to undertake to control wages as well as industrial profits," he said.

Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, of the senate finance committee meanwhile criticized the treasury secretary's plan, declaring that it would "result in incalculable hardship to legitimate business, disrupt production vital to national defense and confiscate normal profits essential to the survival of free enterprise. It would create only still smaller business."

While saying that congressional committees were ready "to impose high rates on true excess profits," George

U. S. STARTS HUGE POWER EXPANSION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The federal power commission disclosed today that it had launched what it intends to be the largest electric power expansion ever undertaken, with the announced objective of giving the United States greater generating capacity than all of Germany, Italy and the axis-aligned countries.

The projected expansion contemplates expenditure of more than $1,500,000,000 in private and public funds over a five-year period.

STEEL PLANT STRIKE ENDED IN BIRMINGHAM

Labor Troubles Keep Mediators Busy In Other Parts Of Country

(By Associated Press)

Birmingham steel mills of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company resumed production today after C. I. O. steel workers ended a short-lived strike, but labor controversies kept mediators busy in other sectors of the defense production front.

Settlement of the Birmingham strike followed soon after removal of 500 Alabama state guardsmen from about company plants. Grievances at the Ensley plant of the company, where the strike began Friday night, will be negotiated, with any wage adjustments retroactive to September 1.

The national defense mediation board arranged to devote much of its attention during the next ten days to three disputes involving 80,000 workers in the coal, shipping and aircraft industries.

Officials of the board said that of the 81 cases it has handled since its creation last March, workers are back on the job in all but one. The sole exception was the Lincoln Mills at Huntsville, Ala., where 1,800 workers were affected by what officials called a lockout.

The board will begin hearings tomorrow on a seamen's strike for war bonuses on ships sailing into dangerous waters.

The board has set Thursday for hearings on a threatened strike of about 22,000 employes of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, in a dispute over wages. At one time scheduled for tomorrow, the strike was postponed at the board's request.

Also pending before the board is the dispute between operators of captive mines, owned principally by steel companies, and the United Mine Workers, which called a strike to enforce its demand for a union shop. The miners have gone back to work pending mediation efforts, which board hearings scheduled for resumption October 7.

The work of the board was assailed yesterday by Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, who contended in a statement that Chairman William H. Davis was abetting a drive by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and former chieftan of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, for a nation-wide closed shop system.

"Employers who have appeared before the chairman," Bridges declared, "report that he has told them in private conference that they should agree to practically any terms, such as the closed shop, that Mr. Lewis proposes, as only through such acquiescence can Mr. Lewis be prevented from calling strikes and stopping defense work."

The New Hampshire senator asked that the personnel of the board be LONDON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Informed sources said today that views of Pope Pius XII would be given this week in London at meetings between Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican and Prime Minister Churchill, United States Ambassador John G. Winant, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., United States envoy to four governments-in-exile, and David Gray, United States minister to Dublin.

Taylor was received Friday and Churchill and Winant yesterday and arranged to see Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden today.

State department officials said Friday that Taylor was in London to discuss refugee problems with British leaders.

Gray, whose knowledge of Irish politics is regarded as second to no American envoy in London, was summoned on quick notice for talks before Taylor departs for Washington.

Chamber Asks Designation Of Twin Cities As Special Defense Area

In view of the fact that the Twin Cities face a serious shortage of housing facilities for the workers to be employed in construction and operation of the ammonia plant at Sterlington, the Chamber of Commerce has made application to Donald M. Nelson, director of priorities of the office of production management, to designate the Twin Cities as a special defense area, in order to permit priorities on the securing of metal and electrical equipment for private construction here.

Although the great majority of the more than 800 persons expected to be employed in construction of the Sterlington plant, and who are expected to make their homes here during the 15-month construction period, have yet to arrive in the Twin Cities, a recent meeting of the 11 licensed real estate dealers in the Twin Cities revealed no residential or apartment vacancies listed with them. Secretary George D. Holland of the Chamber of Commerce said Monday.

An employment peak of 1,500 persons may be reached in the construction of the ammonia plant, Secretary Holland said, and approximately 500

TWO MEN IN PARIS ARE PUT TO DEATH

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Two men were put to death in Paris Saturday for possessing forbidden weapons, it was disclosed today in a published notice signed by General Otto von Stuelpnagel, military command for occupied France.

The men, Eugene Devigne and Mohamed Moah, were sentenced the day before.

This was the first news of the double execution to be published in Berlin. Von Stuelpnagel's announcement, however, had been given out in Paris on the day the men went before the firing squad.

GERMANY ACTS TO END REVOLT AMONG CZECHS

Premier Of Bohemia-Moravia Held For Premeditating Treason

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—(AP)—General Alois Elias, premier of the German protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia, was held today on charges of premeditating high treason as Nazi authorities took steps to curb certain elements among the Czech population which they said had committed acts hostile to the Reich.

Moving with characteristic speed, Reinhard Heydrich, ace trouble-shooter of the German secret police, clamped a state of civil emergency on six districts of Bohemia-Moravia within 24 hours after relieving 68-year-old Baron Konstantin von Neurath as Reich's protector. Von Neurath was said to have asked a temporary leave because of ill health.

No details were released on measures to be taken under the state of emergency, but it generally includes a curfew, closing of theaters and other public gathering places, summary executions, exceptionally heavy prison terms and confiscation of property for acts regarded as offenses against the order and security of the state.

General Elias, who was trained in the Austro-Hungarian army and became premier of the protectorate on April 27, 1939, with Adolf Hitler's blessing, will be tried before the German people's court, an announcement said.

A report broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation that an attempt had been made to assassinate Premier Bela Tuka of Slovakia was called "a childish lie" today by a Slovak legation spokesman.

He said the legation telephoned Tuka late last night and he was in the best of health.

(The British radio reported that Czech resentment at the German measures in Bohemia-Moravia had resulted in an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Professor Bela Tuka, Nazi-backed premier of the little republic of Slovakia.)

In explanation of his action, Heydrich told President Emil Hacha that in recent days irresponsible elements in the pay of the enemies of Europe have committed a number of actions hostile to the Reich."

These elements, Heydrich declared through propaganda connected with these acts, sought to bring the population of the protectorate into opposition to the interests of the Reich."

Later he issued a statement saying, "It is expected the population, which in the majority recognizes as a fact the common destiny of the European peoples with Germany, will not permit itself in any way to be provoked by enemies of the Reich."

Hacha was said to have promised his cooperation.

The districts affected by the emergency decree—forming the most populous part of the protectorate—are

LEGLESS AIRMAN TRIES TO ESCAPE

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Wing Commander Douglas Bader, legless British pilot who now is a German war prisoner, attempted to escape, a Nazi spokesman said today, only a few hours after the R. A. F. had delivered a new artificial limb to him by parachute with the approval of the Germans.

Bader, 30, lost both legs in a flying accident in 1931, and one of the metal legs he wore was damaged when he was forced down over northern France early last month.

The spokesman explained that it was the custom of German fliers to entertain crack enemy pilots after their capture, and said the same honor was accorded Bader at an airdrome in France where he was first held.

After the dinner, Bader—who had just received his new artificial leg—disappeared, the spokesman said. After a search he was found in a barn some distance from the base.

State Returning To Normalcy After Weeks Of Simulated Warfare

General's Congratulatory Message Says Soldiers Did 'Grand Job'

LAKE CHARLES, La., Sept. 29.—(AP)—Louisiana began returning to normalcy after enjoying two weeks of simulated war in the army's greatest field exercises, and the 400,000 troops on maneuvers turned from tactics to the scheduled strife between the Yankees and the Dodgers.

From Shreveport in the northwest corner of the state, where the last four-day battle between the Second and the Third armies ended yesterday, to Lake Charles in the southwest, the field soldiers took it comparatively easy today.

They were under orders to stay in tents in woods and fields until detailed march orders were issued returning them to home stations across the Southern states from the Atlantic coast to Texas. For six weeks the 400,000 men have been constantly in the field.

Furloughs were to be issued many of the men. Special war department regulations provide that as many as 50 per cent of a command might be granted vacations. Soldiers can get 15 days off after six months of service.

The battle ended after the Third army commanded by Lieutenant-General Walter Krueger had penetrated the fringe of Shreveport's defenses and then were stopped dead by the defenders and natural barriers.

Thus ended a 36-hour, 160-mile drive by the Second Armored division and the Second infantry division.

Virtually all of the 400 combat planes of the supporting air task force kept bombing opposing Second army divisions to prevent an effective counterattack.

After two weeks of strenuous day and night tasks, including everything but the danger and strain imposed by shot and shell, the comparatively

DOXEY TAKES SENATE OATH

Fills Seat From Mississippi Formerly Held By Pat Harrison

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Wall Doxey was sworn in today as senator from Mississippi.

A Democratic member of the house of representatives for 16 years, Doxey took over the seat formerly held by the late Pat Harrison, long chairman of the senate finance committee. He defeated Representative Ross Collins in a special election last week.

Doxey was escorted by Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, in the absence from Washington of Senator Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, to the well of the chamber, where the oath was administered by Vice-President Wallace.

Secretary of State Walker, Wasn certified Doxey Saturday as the winner of Tuesday's election over Representative Ross Collins, 61, of Meridian, and Collins conceded his opponent's victory. Both are Democrats.

The official returns tabulated in the secretary of state's office gave Doxey 59,556 votes to 58,738 for Collins, a lead of 818.

Collins, in conceding the closely contested election, said in a statement that if he received evidence sustaining "many reports of irregularities," he would "take such appropriate action as may be necessary."

Governor Johnson today set a special election for Tuesday, November

SIX SOLDIERS AT SHREVEPORT DEAD

SHREVEPORT, La., Sept. 29.—(AP)—The bodies of six soldiers killed in traffic accident near the close of the Louisiana war games were received at a funeral home here. Two were electrocuted when a live wire fell on them after a truck behind their "jeep" struck the guy wire of a telephone pole.

Their deaths raised to 26 the unofficial count of fatalities in the large-scale maneuvers which began September 15. During a month of preliminary maneuvers 62 soldiers were killed or died.

Mother Of Lexington, Ky., Young Woman Is Seriously Wounded

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 29.—(AP)—Police questioned employes of the fashionable Lexington Country club and several other persons today as they sought the gunmen who killed Marion Miley, 27, nationally known golfer, and critically wounded her mother, Mrs. Elsa Ego Miley, 50, in their apartment at the club yesterday.

Chief of Police Austin B. Price said, however, there were no suspects under surveillance and that "we haven't gotten anywhere so far."

Mrs. Miley, who was shot three times, was in a critical condition after an emergency operation yesterday to remove the bullets.

Chief Price said a money bag containing approximately $60 had been found in a locked closet in her bedroom.

Mrs. Miley, manager of the club, had told police before she lapsed into unconsciousness that two men had shot her and her daughter after demanding receipts from a dance held at the club Saturday night. She said

DEPORTATION FOR BRIDGES RECOMMENDED

Jurist Makes Ruling To Attorney General On Labor Leader

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Deportation to his native Australia of Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, was recommended to Attorney General Biddle today on the ground that Bridges was a member of the Communist party and that the Communist party "advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the United States government."

The recommendation was made by Charles B. Sears, retired Buffalo, N. Y., jurist, who presided as a special immigration service inspector at a ten-week hearing in San Francisco to determine whether Bridges was deportable under the immigration laws.

At the same time, Sears denied a request by Bridges to reopen the deportation case to hear evidence that the F. B. I. allegedly tapped the wire of a New York hotel room in which Bridges was staying after the San Francisco hearing ended.

Sears held that after Bridges entered the United States in April, 1920 he became a member of the Communist party and the Marine Workers Industrial union.

In his findings of fact with respect to Bridges' membership in these organizations, Sears held:

"That the Communist party of the United States, from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, is an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the government of the United States."

The inspector also found that the Marine Workers Industrial union which Bridges allegedly joined after coming to this country in 1920 was "a part of the Communist party," and as such, "advocated and taught" the overthrow of the government.

In a report of 185 pages, Sears concluded at one point that Bridges was connected with the Communist party by stating that the "Waterfront Work-

WANT BAR TO BACK NEUTRALITY REPEAL

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 29.—(AP)—A movement was under way today to put the American Bar association, opening its five-day 64th annual convention, on record in favor of repeal of the neutrality law.

The proposal was in a committee report scheduled for submission to the association's section of international and comparative law.

The report, from the committee on laws relating to protection of American citizens and their property in foreign countries and on high seas, said:

"We recommend that the president be free from the restrictions of the so-called neutrality act, and that he exercise all of our national rights under treaties and international law."

The sectional group was to decide whether to pass the pronouncement on to the association for embodiment in a resolution.

In his president's address, Jacob M. Lashly of St. Louis told the association:

"With an inextinguishable will to defend our country, our people and our system of government, the solid bar of America can be relied upon to give itself to national defense."

Great Britain and Italy reported a violent exchange of blows in air and sea fighting today, with R. A. F. bombers raiding nine Fascist cities overnight in the heaviest assaults of the war there, while Premier Mussolini's high command announced a smashing nine-hour attack on a British convoy in the Mediterranean.

Three British cruisers and at least three merchant ships were sunk by Italian torpedo planes, the Fascist high command said.

Nine other craft were reported damaged by bomb-hits, including a British battleship which the Rome radio identified as the 33,950-ton Nelson, one of Britain's newest and biggest capital ships.

In London, the British admiralty heavily discounted the Italian claim, admitting one merchant ship sunk and a warship damaged.

On the Russian war front, the Berlin radio quoted Baghdad dispatches as saying British troops were rumored en route to reinforce Russia's Red armies in the Caucasus.

Two divisions of British troops were said to have left Baghdad for the north.

Simultaneously, an official British communique said Britain's highest commanders in Africa and Asia had worked out "full details of cooperation" regarding "the anti-axis front now established from Syria through Iraq and Iran to the left flank of the Russian armies."

The British leaders, General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in India, and General Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, middle east commander,

KEMP GRANTED ORDER AGAINST SUPERSEDURE

Attorney General Temporarily Restrained From Displacing Him

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 29.—(AP)—District Attorney Bolivar E. Kemp of Tangipahoa parish said today that he had obtained a temporary restraining order preventing Attorney General Eugene Stanley from superseding him in a grand jury investigation of Tangipahoa public agencies.

Kemp reported over telephone that District Judge Robert S. Ellis, Jr., had issued the order on Kemp's plea attacking validity of the legislative act allowing the attorney general to supersede district attorneys.

The grand jury is investigating criminal charges of alleged slander and destruction of public records brought against State Supervisor of Public Funds Jerome A. Hayes by Sheriff Frank M. Edwards. The state has filed embezzlement charges against Edwards, together with a civil suit claiming recovery of more than $100,000 allegedly misappropriated public funds.

Stanley superseded District Attorney Kemp in the case against Hayes and those against Sheriff Edwards as well as any other investigation involving any public body in Tangipahoa parish.

The grand jury had reported to Judge Ellis last week it could see no reason why District Attorney Kemp should be superseded and considered the attorney general had overstepped his authority.

However, Stanley insisted that under act 24 of the first extra legislative session of 1934, the act which District Attorney Kemp attacked in his petition filed this morning, that the attorney general may supersede any district attorney at his discretion and

As customary, the week will overflow with events of interest to this particular group of women.

The week's program will be inaugurated next Sunday morning when club members will meet in a body on the mezzanine floor of the Frances Hotel, going later to the Presbyterian Church where the pastor, Rev. E. Holloway, will address the assemblage on a subject of particular interest. "Look to the Spirit Within" was the subject of the program held at the home of Mrs. C. H. Modes by the Business and Professional Women's Club. The purpose of this program, in line with the National Federation's theme, "Strengthen Democracy for Defense," was to clear away all undemocratic actions of which club members might be guilty. Mrs. Gladys Miles led the discussions and plans were made to co-relate programs and services with other service clubs of the city.

Plans were also made to combine the business and program meetings for the first Tuesday night of each month, in order that one meeting each month would be free for social or service meetings.

Miss Alice Hodge was present and told in an interesting manner of the activities of the Miami, Fla., club, of which she is a member.

Refreshments were served during the social interlude to the following: Mrs. Jennie Thornton, Miss Kate Perkins, Mrs. Johnnie Elbert, Mrs. Lillie Arent, Mrs. Effie Allen, Miss Mary Hester, Miss Alice Baur, Mrs. Fay Heard, Mrs. Laura Slator, Miss Hazel Wakefield, Miss Mary Clay, Mrs. Elroy Smith, Mrs. Dora Anish, Mrs. Gladys Miles, Miss Bernice Wright, Miss Mary O'Kelly, Miss Alice Hodge of Miami, Fla., Mrs. Elroy Scruggs, Paris, Tenn., Miss Gregory Coronado and Mrs. H. Charming Events Honor Guests In City

The visit of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Thompson of Los Angeles in the home of their brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Thompson on Milton street, overflowed with diversified pleasures. Of particular interest was their motor trip to Vicksburg, Natchez, New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

The social side of life in Monroe was stressed with gracious hostesses and genial hosts entertaining with dinner parties, supper parties, teas, and boating parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Selig's compliment was a buffet supper party. The guests upon arrival were served aperitifs and canapes.

The supper, featuring southern dishes exclusively, was served from a beautifully appointed, candlelit table. The guests in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson included, Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Colvert, Miss Marguerite Colvert, Dr. and Mrs. Irving Wolff, Mrs. Blanche Sims, Mr. Rankin Sims, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Thompson.

Mrs. Selig presented Mrs. Thompson with a beautiful gift for remembrance.

Dr. and Mrs. Irving Wolff entertained during the coffee hour at their home in Fairview. The beauty of the late summer weather prompted the hostess to welcome her guests in the attractive out-of-door living room hedged in with japonica bushes and well ordered beds of late blooming flowers.

A variety of luscious edibles were served from a beautifully appointed table.

A visit to Monroe would be quite incomplete without a trip on the Ouachita. Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Whitaker's boating party on the Brown Kraft with Mr. and Mrs. Jess Hilton, cohosts, was one of the most enjoyable compliments arranged for Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Colvert and their daughter, Miss Marguerite Colvert extended courtesies to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson in their charming home on Northeast Junior college campus during the tea hour. The conversational hour was of particular interest to the host and his guests of honor as they attended the Conway, Ark., high school when Dr. Colvert was a member of the faculty.

It afforded Mr. and Mrs. Thompson considerable pleasure to entertain friends who had extended gracious courtesies during their visit in Monroe at dinner ere their departure.

Mrs. E. N. Thompson's place at the dinner table was marked with a beautiful gift in recognition of her birthday anniversary.

DARLING OF THE GODS

Olympe Bradna was so named because she was born a few doors from the Olympia theater in Paris where the famous animal circus owned by her parents was showing. She was christened Marie Antoinette Olympe (pronounced O-lamp). She might never have been widely known had not fourteen of the family's trained dogs died in one day as the result of some mysterious cause. All by herself, Olympe, aged eight, started out to take her place as a breadwinner. Trained in singing and dancing from infancy, she won on her own, the part of the child specialty dancer in a French version of "Hit the Deck." She later toured Europe in musical shows and accompanied a unit of the Folies Bergere to Broadway where she was acclaimed by press and public. She was signed by Paramount and appeared successfully in a number of pictures. Olympe, who will reach voting age—and also become a citizen of the United States—in 1941, is five feet three inches tall, weighs one hundred and ten, and has dark hair and eyes. She speaks English with little trace of accent, except when excited. Her pets are a pair of fox terriers, Baby and Butch. She lives on a ranch in the San Fernando valley with Papa and Mama Bradna.

Flying Bombers Across Atlantic Is 'Monotonous'

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Flying bombers across the Atlantic ocean from Canada to England is just about the most monotonous thing that ever happened.

At least, that's what Captain John J. DeVine, Jr., says.

"Nothing to it," said the 26-year-old former United States army flier home for a week-end visit with his mother.

"There's no thrill in this job. It's so monotonous as to be boring. All you do is set your course on old George (automatic pilot.)"

DeVine has made two trips in Hudson-Lockheed bombers since joining the Royal Air Force ferry service two months ago after being mustered out of the army at Manila.

"While there have been no attacks, as far as I know, from enemy squadrons, we nevertheless keep our ships near what cloud strata there is in sight—just in case," he said. "Our job is to get the ships across safe and sound and keep out of trouble.

"Another instruction is to veer off from convoy below. A few pot shots from a gun crew which might mistake you for an enemy is no help to your peace of mind, and might blow you out of the air besides."

"You're in England within nine to 12 hours," he added.

He likes the pay though—$1,000 a month for one flight, $1,200 for two during a 30-day period and $1,500 for three.

"If there ever was a thrill at all," he said, "it was when I overshot the British isles and got lost for three hours over the English channel. But I wasn't worried because I had Mae West (life preserver) with me. And besides I think I could swim the channel."

There's a point to the swimming business. When he was six he swam the Delaware river. A year later he swam Biscayne Bay, Miami, Fla., then began training to swim the English channel. But his parents told him to wait until he was 16.

"I never got around to swimming the channel," he laughed. "But perhaps my long distance swimming will come in handy one of these days."

BISHOP DEDICATES CHURCH

Bishop Smith Dedicates Fine Church Structure

Elaborate Exercises Held By Methodists In West Monroe Sunday

"We dedicate this church in loving memory of all those who have gone before, and of all those hearts and hands who have served this church; with deep gratitude for loyal comrades who have made with us this spiritual adventure; and with high hopes for those who shall walk this way in days to come."

The foregoing, from the dedicatory ritual, as spoken by Bishop A. Frank Smith, comprised an important part of the service when the First Methodist Church in West Monroe was formally dedicated Sunday morning.

Long before the hour for service the auditorium was filled and extra seats were placed in aisles. The altar and window ledges were made beautiful with cut flowers in which roses, gladioli and chrysanthemums predominated. An enlarged white-vested choir occupied the choir loft and former pastors, the present pastors, Dr. C. Karlos Smith, District Superintendent Dr. W. L. Dose, Jr., and Bishop Smith had seats in the pulpit.

The sermon by Bishop Smith was both impressive and inspirational. He took for his theme the 13th chapter of I Corinthians, particularly stressing the last verse: "And now abideth faith, hope and love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

He paid tribute to the vision and sacrificial efforts of all those who have labored to liquidate the church debt, and also paid compliment to the ceaseless and unfailing efforts and vision of the pastor, Dr. Smith, in seeing that the goal was achieved at this time.

He said in part:

"Some 30 years after the crucifixion, the Apostle Paul made his way from Athens to Corinth. He was for the first time on the European continent to preach the gospel of Christ. He had been discouraged in Athens, where the Greek philosophers refused to accept the teachings of Christianity. He had tried to match wits with them and in their opinion had failed. That caused him to realize that he must hereafter preach Christ and Him crucified. He learned the sad truth that flesh and blood cannot grasp the things of God.

"He remained for 18 months in Corinth and established the strongest of all the churches to that time there. Then he proceeded to Antioch. Paul then set out for Ephesus on his third mission on or about A. D. 56, when he received a letter from the church in Corinth. The followers there had many problems to solve. They sought Paul's advice. These problems Paul answered, and in his answer there fell from his lips the greatest example of inspired thought that ever proceeded from a human mind. It is contained in the 13th chapter of I Corinthians. He soared from things of earth and sense into the everlasting heights. Those things with which the followers of Corinth were troubled over? Yes, they had some importance but they were as the scaffolding around the temple. He soared upward to Eternity and declared that love is the one essential. That this is all that really matters. Paul was changed. He had traveled on the Damascus road. He only knew his Savior and Him crucified and that all men are brothers.

"Faith is that quality that causes man and animals to differ. Animals and men have many similar characteristics but only man can have faith. Faith is like unto a sixth sense. It is not bound by the world that is. The spirit of faith has made possible all scientific inventions. Edison failed 1,000 times before he was able to succeed in one of his inventions. The faith of Columbus caused him intrepidly to sail on and his faith led to the discovery of a new world.

"Hope was a term that once seemed to me to be almost a synonym of faith. But this is not so. Hope is the quality that acts as a springboard. Faith believes but does nothing. Hope causes action to cause and effect those things in which one by faith believes. It is the springboard of life. Hope is personal.

"John Wesley, while not a great theologian, was able in his writings to bring things down to man's level. He had hope for mankind and hence did great things.

"Love is desired for perfection. Each person would excel. If it is for money and one succeeds, it is all left behind when the end comes, if it is for glory or power, all this fades away in the end but only when one fixes his desire for perfection in God is his love made to come true."

Former pastors and also Dr. R. W. Vaughan of Ruston were recognized. Miss Alice Henry was also recognized as a woman of vision and one who had a large part in the paying off of the church indebtedness. R. M. McCrocklin, Sunday school superintendent, was given a gold pin for 20 years' service in the Sunday school, teachers of the Sunday school and leaders in women's activities all were mentioned, and credit given for their unswerving assistance.

A telegram of congratulation was received and read from the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe.

Flowers on the altar were in memory of members of the church who have now passed on.

The program for the service was as follows:

Prelude, "Largo," Mrs. Jack Willis; opening hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy"; call to worship by Rev. H. N. Brown; anthem, "O Lamb of God," choir; responsive reading led by Rev. Louis Hoffpauir; Gloria Patri, choir; Scripture lesson by Rev. Martin Hebert; prayer, W. L. Doss, Jr.; hymn; announcements, and offering; introductions; sermon by Bishop Smith; act of dedication; the Sanctus, choir; prayer, Bishop Smith; hymn, "God of Grace and God of Glory"; benediction, Rev. F. J. McCoy.

A number of interior views were taken by several local photographers in the course of the service.

The original Methodist church, first erected at Old Trenton, was moved to West Monroe in 1885. The present edifice was erected in 1919. There was some difficulty in its financing and in 1925 a loan of $13,000 was obtained. This loan, which with principal and interest has totaled $23,000, is now all liquidated. During the four-year term that Dr. Karlos Smith has been pastor, 400 members have been added to the church and $45,000 has been raised in various departments of the church, in addition to the liquidation of the indebtedness.

DIAMOND BATTLE SLATED TONIGHT

Kiwanians And Lions Will Have It Out At Casino Park; USO To Benefit

Kiwanians and Lions will clash on the diamond at Casino Park Monday at 8 p.m., when they endeavor to exhibit their respective prowess in softball. All the proceeds will go to the United Service Organizations and a large and enthusiastic attendance is anticipated.

The Lions will go into the fray with determination and expectation of winning, for they won out in a similar game a year ago. But the Kiwanis camp claims that it was all an accident last year and this time the Lions will be shown up in a bad light.

Dr. P. L. (Blind Tom) Perot and Dr. A. L. (No See 'Em) Peters have been engaged as umpires.

The coaches of the two rival teams have been giving their men "the works" and they are expected to show up well for their trainers. Some of the popular stars who will be presented on the diamond are First Baseman Harvey (Lumberjack) Benoit, Shortstop R. L. (Pee Wee) Woods and Outfielders Bob Ed (Ghost) Tucker, Dr. Irving (Slugger) Wolff and "Pappy" Strauss—the last named wearing a catcher's harness.

A popular water boy will be C. C. (Whistle Wetter) Colvert, and Ed Apperson will be bat boy. Sid (Big Mouth) Moss will be cheerleader and he promises to make such a racket that his boss, L. W. Baldwin, up in St. Louis will hear the rumpus.

NAZIS SAY WOMEN, CHILDREN ABUSED

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Charges that about 470 German women and children who had been assured of safe conduct from Teheran to the Turkish border were abused in a manner "unexampled in the history of international relations" were made today by an authorized spokesman.

The Germans, who now have crossed the border from Iran, were virtually stripped by Russian woman soldiers, all their possessions, including trinkets and wedding rings, were taken and the baggage of the German diplomatic mission was robbed, it was charged.

The spokesman said they arrived in Turkey in such "terrible condition" that large sums of money had to be sent to Turkey to supply the victims with enough clothing to become presentable.

The German people, the spokesman declared, hold not only the Russians but also the British government and people responsible.

Well Done!

Anyone who has carefully followed the first-hand accounts of the American army maneuvers this summer is bound to be considerably impressed with the progress that army has made.

These maneuvers have come about as close to the real thing as it is possible to come short of actual war. Real hardships have been undergone, real difficulties have been surmounted; some men have died, having given their lives for their country no less than if they had died in battle. The flyers and others who were killed have, in a very real sense, given their lives to save those of their comrades, for maneuvers are made realistic in the hope that the training afforded will save lives should actual war come.

Many observers believe that the American army today is, for its size, equal in training and quality to any army which has not actually been in combat. It is idle to argue that their training is, or can be, equal to the experience of the German veterans who have survived Poland, Norway, France, the Balkans, and Russia. These are graduates of war's ultimate school, and by now they should be and probably are the most competent soldiers in the world. Short of such experience, which we still hope may not be necessary, the American soldiers of the new army begin to look very good indeed.

Apparently their physical condition is excellent. The mud, the chiggers and flooded streams and short rations over which they have triumphed are eloquent testimony of that. Weapons are still short, but that is being rapidly overcome. Officers whose physical or other qualifications are not up to standard are being eliminated; bugs are being taken out of the machine.

Morale problems have declined during the maneuver period. When there is plenty to do, grousing falls off. If, when the maneuvers are over, the new equipment continues to pour in, inequalities of equipment at various camps are ironed out, and a thousand little sources of friction smoothed out by the iron of experience, spirits (and the spirit) of the men in the camps will probably rise. As you see the army men on the streets of cities these days, you note an increasing air of competence and confidence, as compared to that seen when they were inducted a year ago.

America has good reason to be proud of her young soldiers of the new army. We wish there were some way in which the whole country could join, when the maneuvers are over, in a single, resounding "Well done!"

Manhattan
By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The decision of Park Commissioner Moses to move the Aquarium from Manhattan to the Bronx was bad news for most New Yorkers. The old land mark has been a point of pride for decades, and transferring it from the city's best known borough to its least glamorous precinct may be the beginning of the end for a bygone age in New York.

For the Aquarium was once Fort Clinton, built by the citizens doggedly intent on keeping out sea-borne invaders. . . . Years after this it became Castle Gardens, a point of social festivities, and Jenny Lind made her first American appearance there. Later it was turned into a home for rare fishes and, as such, has delighted thousands of people each week who come to New York and tarry by its glass walled exhibits.

Commissioner Moses says he has no objections to the building remaining where it is if the city wants to put up the $182,000 necessary for its restoration as a fort. It is probable that no such amount will be forthcoming, which means, in the end, that one fine morning the wrecking crews will bear down on the old Battery Park scene and the cranes and sledge hammers of Manhattan's demolishers will succeed where the guns of enemy ships more than a century ago failed.

In rambling about the streets of New York for almost a decade and reporting its activities I have received communications from people in almost every one of the 48 states. As a rule, these writers were potential tourists to New York. Scores have asked about the Aquarium—what admission was charged, was it easily reached by subway or trolley, what were the hours—but not one soul has ever asked me, "What about the Bronx?" The Bronx is one of the five boroughs of this city. It is the home of the Bronx Bombers—the New York Yankees—and Joe DiMaggio, and it is also the home of the Bronx Zoo. Commissioner Moses wants to put most of the fish and the marine exhibits at the zoo temporarily. Why he wants to touch them at all is a question that many people would like answered.

The Aquarium is not the first of New York's earlier to be banished. Civic Virtue, that odd piece of sculptory which for years riled some of our sensitive citizens—probably because it represented a man with his foot on a woman's neck—has been exiled to Queens, a sister borough of the Bronx. For years old "Civic" hung around city hall and inspired both awe and delight in hundreds of thousands of citizens and visitors.

Now the Aquarium is to be evicted and I am beginning to wonder whether Liberty, on her island in the harbor, or U. S. Grant, in his cupola tomb on Riverside drive, may not be next. If the old general's shade continues to hover at the scene, it might be a good idea to drop Bob Moses a little note, and forestall, perhaps, one of those impromptu journeys that seem to be the new order around here. The note might say, "Dear Bob, drop in at the Tomb and see me the next time you're up this way. I want to have a little talk with you. Nothing very important, but I like it fine up here on the Drive. After all these years, I sure would hate to wind up in some place like Far Rockaway, or Coney. Y'r Obdt. Svt., U. S Grant."

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 29.—Expect Ann Sheridan and George ("I-won't-marry") Brent to altar-trek in December—probably during Xmas week. . . . Preston Foster, owner of Hollywood's most elaborate station wagon, is loading up for a jaunt into Mexican wilds. . . . Ann Sothern and Cesar Romero are dating steadily, but it's admiration, not affection.

Ha! One of the Mexican officials responsible for tabooing Orson Welles' proposed picture about that country is a cousin of Orson's wife-to-be, Dolores del Rio! . . . Renee Hubert, who's been designing screen togs for Gloria Swanson for 16 years, will sketch her whole off-screen winter wardrobe while Gloria is here for film parlays.

Stand-by for a new flock of back income tax claims against Hollywood biggies, with a top-flight comic first to fall under the government axe. . . . Height of something or other: Dancer June Havoc's Hollywood arrival in a station wagon loaded with cats, dogs, birds, her baby girl—and a goat to furnish milk for baby! . . . Thomas Mitchell has received an okay from medics to face cameras again—for the first time since his mid-April set accident.

Looks like Mary Howard would rather be a Hollywood baby than the governor's lady—she nixed another (the third) marriage bid from Prentice Cooper, chief exec of Tennessee. . . . Bob Hope's publishers expect his tome, "They've Got Me Covered," to out-sell "G. W. T. W." and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" combined; they've upped the first press run to 3,000,000.

Frank (RKO director) Ryan, for rearranging an entire week's shooting schedule to avoid replacing young actress Irene Coleman when traffic accident injuries threatened to rob her of her first real break. . . . No Bells to: Those Hollywood flag-wavers who, while earning huge fortunes in the United States, busy themselves waving any flag but that of the United States.

Our Children
By ANGELO PATRI

3-YEAR-OLDS ARE SELF-CENTERED

When children in the 3-year age group play together it is well to have an understanding adult within reach. These children are growing big muscle masses, back and shoulders and legs and arms, and Nature urges them to exercise them, hard, in order to develop them well.

The children have no knowledge of the feelings of others. They are completely self-centered, measuring happiness by their personal feelings with no regard for the feelings of others, big or little. This is nothing to their discredit, nothing to punish them for, but something to be trained and disciplined into usefulness. That takes time and understanding leadership.

We have all known children who, without provocation, have laid a playmate low with a whack on the head from a spade wielded by an incredibly strong right arm. The attacker is not an incipient criminal. He is an impulsive child in a stage of growth where impulses are used to relieve pressure on nerves and muscles that are in need of relief.

The growth of these big muscles, and the effort to use them, create a feeling of great pressure in some little children and they are impelled to release the suppressed energy in some violent fashion. That is why they strike out in such a stormy fashion. They are not murderous—just active, according to their nature.

The reason for their behavior does not mend the hurt. Nor does it often lessen the fear and anger of the mother of the hurt one. Nor does it relieve the mother of the attacker of her responsibility for the supervision of her active impulsive 3-year-old. He must be supervised, and he must be disciplined, and held in check until he has control of himself which may mean a couple of years. Mothers of the same neighborhood usually plan to take turns in overseeing the play group. That is about the best way out.

Some of these children bite. When one of them persists in biting have the children's dentist examine his mouth. Usually there is something about the teeth that makes the child feel he must bite, and the dentist usually can relieve him. Sometimes new teeth are coming out; sometimes the teeth already out are pressing against those on the way, or there is something lacking in the child's nutrition. This can happen to well-fed children. So make sure about it.

Don't lose your head when a child bites. Look at him gravely, remove him quietly from the scene, tell him biting is out—no child bites and continues to play with other children because they won't have him. Keep him alone; that is, apart from the other children, for the remainder of the play session, the half day in which he misbehaved. Don't isolate him longer because little children have short memory spans and forget very soon why they are punished.

Children 3 years of age need careful supervision. Try to arrange for it even though the next baby is close upon his heels. He must learn to live with his neighbors and they with him, and the earlier the better. Give him a chance.

HISTORY WRITTEN ON THE WALLS OF EUROPE

Washington Daybook
By Jack Stinnett

(Second of two articles on the "petroleum products shortage.")

WASHINGTON — Wading through the confusing maze of statements that have come out of the so-called oil shortage in the east, one is bound to stumble over some significant conclusions:

(1) This is a continuation, if not a culmination, of the ancient fight between the oil companies and the railroads.

Railroad rates on petroleum products were four to six times tanker and pipeline rates. Any company that had its own pipelines or tankers was just that much ahead in its delivered price—but, any company that had a pipeline or a fleet of tankers was knocking the railroads out of just that much business.

In Georgia, the railroads blocked two interstate pipelines (one of them for 18 months) by refusing to grant rights-of-way across their rights-of-way until President Roosevelt, invoking the Cole act, granted the pipeline companies eminent domain on the theory that it was in the best interests of national defense to allow the pipeline companies to condemn property for right-of-way.

The railroads claimed they had 18,000 to 20,000 idle tank cars available. (This really was an "equivalent figure." Nobody has been willing to guess even the actual number of idle tank cars but the railroads claimed that if all available cars were put to best use, it would be equivalent to putting that number of cars on the rails.)

Reserve Supplies Protected

Not until September did the railroads and oil companies get together to solve the shortage problem. When finally they did, the rail firms agreed to cut rates on crude and gasoline about 35 per cent.

(2) There never really was any actual shortage of petroleum products—but there did develop an alarming decline (and it could have grown greater if something hadn't been done to stop it) in reserve stocks. If this decline had been allowed to go on indefinitely, all the dire results that the most pessimistic predicted could have come about.

However, activities of the petroleum coordinator's office by September had cut this withdrawal of reserve stocks from 353,200 barrels a day to 174,500 barrels a day, with the virtual assurance that barring something unforeseen it would be eliminated entirely by spring.

(3) That if the 17 eastern seaboard states and the District of Columbia are any criterion, the country can't be stampeded into any hysteria by statements of politicians and business leaders. So apathetic was the public to the gasoline conservation program that consumption maintained its seasonal level or increased throughout the campaign.

A Major Problem

(4) That we haven't heard the last of this battle. Senator Francis Maloney's investigation committee has promised to reopen hearings any minute—even to digging into "ulterior motives," if any, behind this overblown bubble. And that particular attention will be paid to the request of Russell E. Singer, general manager of the American Automobile association, that investigation be made of motor fuel price increases.

(5) That even with all our fine highways, superb railroads and free waterways, distribution (or transportation) still is one of our prime problems and must be given equal consideration with production and manufacture in the national defense set-up.

(6) That there's nothing like an investigation to start the ball rolling. Almost everything that has been done to alleviate the oil situation has been done since the investigation started. This has been a skirmish between production and distribution. Mr. Ickes and his boys just happened to get caught in the middle.

MOVIE COUPLE TO RECEIVE SOLDIERS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Sept. 29.—(AP)—Every other Sunday, singer Jeanette MacDonald and her actor husband, Gene Raymond, are to have open house at their Bel Air home for 10 soldiers and sailors and 10 young women.

They started their plan of "date leaves," under the auspices of the United Service Organizations, yesterday. The 10 young service men came from southern California camps, and their dates were hand-chosen by the deans of women of the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

The coeds and cadets swam in the movie couple's pool, enjoyed a steak barbecue in the afternoon, and then danced or played cards and games.

Said Miss MacDonald:

"We're giving these parties here every two weeks and we're urging our friends to do the same.

"Families anywhere can go to the U. S. O. and offer to open their homes to groups of the boys, at least once a month. I'm sure colleges or other reputable girls' organiaztions will be willing to cooperate in providing dates.

"Anyone who has ever been homesick can appreciate the importance of helping the trainees to meet nice girls in real home surroundings."

The equipment of the Monroe fire department was supplemented today by the arrival of 2,000 feet of hose from the American LaFrance Engine company of Elmira, N. Y. This hose, with that already in service at the three local fire stations, will increase the total amount of hose now carried by the fire department to approximately 8,000 feet. The added hose will increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the department. The new hose will be placed in service at No. 1 fire station.

Agricultural clubs of boys and girls are being formed in the parish this week, this being designated "club week" as enrollment week. That the number of a year ago, when 500 were enrolled, will be exceeded is the prediction of E. R. Strahan, Ouachita parish farm agent. Today enrollment is being made at Claiborne, Chenierre, Drew and Beard Springs. Mt. Vernon, Luna, Cypress and Lapine have already been organized earlier this week.

The ten per cent tobacco tax, passed at the last session of the state legislature, goes into effect tomorrow. There was a rush of local tobacco dealers today by persons who mainly bought supplies of cigarettes, cigars, and pipe tobacco before the tax went into effect.

Macdam roads get their name from John Loudown Mcadam, 19th century British road builder.

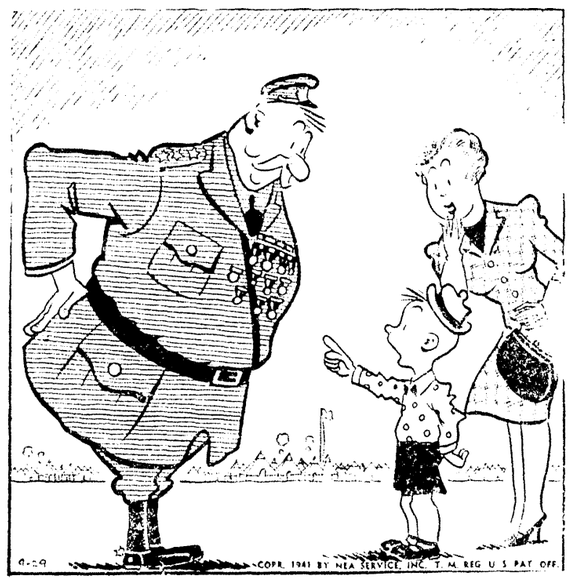
FUNNY BUSINESS



"When never your chest's filled with medals I suppose the war's over, sir."

FOR THE LOVE OF PAM
By VIVIEN GREY

Chapter Ten

Pam to the Rescue

PAM stepped back—so his hands couldn't quite touch hers.

"You couldn't have anything to say to me that I'd want to listen to, Jerry. I think I'd better go in, now that you've untangled yourselves from my garden . . ."

"Come on, Jerry," Freda broke in. "Can't you see that the girl's giving you the air, darling? Don't you recognize extermination technique when you see it?"

"Shut up!" growled Jerry, then he turned to Pam and started to move toward the house. "Pam, I've got to talk to you. You've got to listen, whether you want to or not."

Freda stretched an arm out for Jerry, missed him, and then flopped in a soft, apparently boneless heap on the grass. Jerry paid no attention, trying to urge Pam on toward the house.

"But, Jerry, you can't leave her there. It's damp. She'll take cold."

"Good. She needs something like that."

"Jerry, you've got to pick her up. Put her in your car and take her home."

"I won't. I've got things to say to you."

"And do you think, if you're the kind of man who'll let a girl catch her death of cold through your carelessness, I want to hear anything you might say?"

"Freda's putting on an act!" Jerry exclaimed angrily. "She's got anything that happens coming to her."

"Putting on an act? I don't understand?"

"Of course you wouldn't, Pam." His voice was suddenly tender. "How could you? You're so different."

Pam felt as if tears were dropping in her heart. The sweet, familiar tenderness of his voice! But the moon, sailing high in the sky, chose that moment to pick out Freda's diamond and light it magically.

"An act?" Pam heard herself repeating coldly. "That sounds like a poor excuse for your rudeness, Jerry."

"Yes, an act!" It was Jerry who was indignant then. "That girl could show Helen Hayes things and still have lots of lessons left over. Come on in the house. You're listening to me for a while." He put his arm around her and was moving toward the house. It was only with difficulty that he kept from straining her to his heart.

Jerry Winthrope had met many girls. But Pam stood out above them with the clear and faithful beauty of a Cathedral spire in a little Mexican town. The others could not even be compared with her.

In the glorified instant that he stood there with his arm around her, his vision swept down the list of girls who had been the gay playmates of his lighter hours. He had never been serious with any of them, except in that rather half-hearted way, with Freda.

Beautiful, willful Freda. Gay, Sally, Harriet. And on finally to May. Jerry's thoughts paused for an instant on May. She was writing him still. He answered her only after hearing from her repeatedly. He had never made any promises to May who danced in a Broadway floor show. But May had sticking qualities, it was apparent. Jerry lingered on that instant as he stood there in the warm, scented moonlight, his arm around Pamela.

Freda's Act

"LET'S go in, Pam. I must talk to you," he said finally. There were things he wanted to settle.

But Freda's voice cut through the soft Florida night:

"Go into that house and I'll scream. I'll sound your car siren and scream for you so all Key West will know you're in there with her, Jerry Winthrope! And this isn't a nice hour for a girl to have callers!"

"Oh, no you won't!" Jerry turned fiercely toward the heap on the grass.

"I will," Freda giggled.

Jerry stood irresolute, looking first at one girl, then the other.

"Bring her in," Pam said softly.

"I won't!" Jerry stared down at Freda and then stirred the fabric of her dress with the toe of his shoe.

"I will then." As quietly as she had spoken, Pam moved toward the girl and bent to help her up. There was a stifled sound from Jerry.

"Oh, all right!" he cried in exasperation. "If you will be a good Samaritan! But she doesn't deserve it!"

Jerry bent and picked the girl up. He carried her into the house and then dumped her unceremoniously into a chair.

"And I suppose you think I can talk to you with this leering, jeering female around?" he demanded of Pam.

"No one asked you to talk to me. As a matter of fact, I don't want to talk to you. I want you to be on your way just as fast as you can. I've seen all I want to of you!"

Jerry stared in surprise, his anger leaving him. "Pam, I don't understand," he said.

"It doesn't make much difference whether you do or not."

"Oh, yes it does!" He put his hands on her shoulders and forced her to face him. "It makes all the difference in the world. Pam, what's happened? What's changed you?"

"You would ask that!" she said bitterly.

"Well, what should I ask?"

"Nothing. You should know."

"All I know is that you walked out on me. Walked out on me and made a laughing stock of me."

"Good! You asked for it!"

"Are you crazy?"

"No, but you are! You must be!"

Jerry stared at Pam for a puzzled moment. Then he turned, mumbling something about women and their lack of understanding, and rushed out of the door.

Pam thought that was what she wanted, but when the door closed behind his angry figure she felt as if the light had gone out of her life. She stood, stricken, listening to the sound of his steps on the walk. The beat of her heart was like an aching echo of them.

"Jerry! Oh, Jerry!" His name came involuntarily to her lips.

Freda slowly opened her eyes and sat watching Pam in silence for a moment.

"I'm sorry," she said finally. "I hadn't realized."

"Sorry?" Pam came back to the present with difficulty. "You hadn't realized what?"

"That it could be like that. I mean there was something in your voice. I could hear it. Something I've never felt for Jerry and probably never will. So," with a gesture that had in it something gay and gallant, "I give him to you, Pam. I'm stepping out of the picture."

Pam looked at the other girl doubtfully. She brushed impatiently at her eyes with the back of her hand. Freda mustn't see her crying. She was not sure she understood what Freda had just been saying. It might merely be more of her brittle young smartness. It might be Freda's idea of fun to trap her into further signs of affection for Jerry and then scoff at her.

"You — you must be frozen," Pam said not quite steadily. "I'll —I'll make some tea."

Gift From Freda

SHE hurried from the room. In the kitchen she found Melita in a crisp, fresh housedress. Its colorful pattern was blurred by the mist in Pam's dark eyes.

"Oh, Melita, it's so early. You shouldn't be up!"

"Hush, bambi," gently from Melita. "If it is early for Melita; twice early is it for her bambi." She took the tea things from Pam's hands. "Tea, bambi? And strong?"

"Please. The China, Melita. With lime. And get the pretty cups Grandsir brought from India."

"Yes. And now dry your eyes and go back to your strange company. I'll bring the tea."

Pam went back to Freda, a smile wavering over her stricken young face.

"I hope you've forgiven me this tonight." Freda had the grace to beg in an humble voice.

Before Pam could reply, Melita glided in with tea things on a beautiful old silver tray. Freda glanced at Melita in surprise.

"Oh, I'm sorry you had to get your help up," she said to Pam.

"But I didn't," Pam said as she served the tea. "Melita just got up and came down. She's like that."

"Yes"—Freda took the cup from Pam — "she would. Your help would be like that. That's what I mean about you, Pam. You and Jerry. That's what I was trying to tell you."

"I'm afraid I don't know what you're talking about, though," Pam said.

"I mean, Pam, the difference between you and me. You're—well, people would love you because you love them. It's that way with Jerry. You love him. You love him with such a selflessness. So you can give him what I never can. And I have my decent, generous moments, Pam, really I do. And I like Jerry too well to cheat him out of the happiness you can give him. See what I mean?"

Pam wondered if she did, if she was really hearing Freda's words and understanding them rightly.

"I," she said hesitantly, "I'm not sure."

Freda caught something of the doubt and distrust in Pam's eyes.

"I'm being honest with you, Pam. You can believe me. Jerry asked me to for his sake. I'm going to give it to him. He's a good egg. I don't know that he quite deserves you, but he certainly deserves better than a tarill-hound like me."

"I don't believe we can sit here and dispose of Jerry's future like this between us," Pam said quietly. "After all, he'll take the woman he wants, or she'll leave him."

"And that woman will be you. Take him, Pam. Don't let any hurt pride or anything keep you from it. Jerry's worth it, believe me. I've known him all my life, you see. Jerry needs someone like you. Don't let Lenore get you down."

"But I don't know why you're telling me all this," Pam said.

"Because I don't want you to miss the chance of a lifetime. I mean the chance to get Jerry Winthrope."

BANKERS URGED TO RALLY U. S. DEFENSE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29—(AP)—American bankers were urged today by Deane W. Malott, chancellor of the University of Kansas, to rally the American people to the defense of American ideals.

Speaking at the opening session of the American Bankers Association's 67th annual convention, Malott asked:

"Are the bankers of America taking the leadership that belongs to you, by right of ability and community standing, to rally Americans everywhere to the urgency, the self-sacrifice, the action, needed to preserve our very way of life?

"You are not fulfilling your jobs unless each of you contributes now to this colossal task," he continued in his prepared address.

Malott said the United States was faced with a choice of unpleasant alternatives—German victory, for which the country is in no manner prepared, or the discomforts of a war economy.

"The American people as a whole have not faced this," he continued. "And if we are not faced promptly, it may be too late."

Association officials said they expected approximately 5,000 bankers from all sections of the country to register for the convention, which will continue through Thursday.

Separate sessions will be held for the state bank division of the association and for the national bank division, the savings division and the trust division.

Plans also were made for round table discussions on public relations, bank management, defense financing and current economic problems.

EROISM TOLD IN TORPEDOING OF PINK STAR

aster Relates One Man Swam Away After Seeing Lifeboat Full

By Drew Middleton

ssociated Press Foreign Affairs Writer)

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Sept. 24.—Delayed)—(AP)—The wooden-legged aster of the torpedoed freighter Pink ar told today a story of self-effacing roism by the Canadian second officer, J. L. (Jim) Cassidy, who gave his life so as not to overcrowd lifeboat.

"Cassidy swam up to our only lifeat. He saw that it was full, waved odbye and swam away. We never w him again," said Captain J. C. acKenzie.

He looked around at the grim faces his 23 fellow survivors of the crew 36. No one said a word. You uld hear the wind beating against e side of the Icelandic hut where is tense interview was granted.

(The state department announced eptember 23 that the survivors, none mericans, had been landed in good ape at Reykjavik.

(The Pink Star, under the flag of mama after the United States took r into protective custody—she formerly was the 4,150-ton Danish motorip Lundby—was the first ship unr American control to be sunk after resident Roosevelt's shoot-on-sight eech of September 11.

(The Pink Star was en route to Iceand in a Canadian convoy when she as destroyed September 19, 275 miles rtheast of Cape Farewell, at the uthern tip of Greenland. She was med.)

Cassidy, the hero of the Pink Star, me from New Brunswick. The aster himself, the 53-year-old Macenzie, was in the water for five urs. But his tribute was for Cassidy.

"It was the finest thing I ever saw," said.

Of himself, MacKenzie said, "with o life belts to keep me up and a t of wood from a lard box to paddle with," he had managed to keep oving for three hours. Two hours efore he was picked up, however, had lost the use of his good leg d the stump of the other from the umbing cold of the water.

He chuckled when he said that the ill had no effect on his artificial g.

"I wasn't feeling a thing in it," acKenzie said.

Of the tense moments before the nk Star went down, MacKenzie said: "I could see the torpedoes coming r just minutes. I shoved the ship ard apeort and then they hit. Glory it was like the judgment of God. e seemed to be tearing to pieces." The Arctic gale now was whistling ound the corners of the hut. Of e faces of the survivors only the aster's was not set in grim hard . He was telling a story.

"A bit of a life raft was blown on the bridge and the water thrown p by the explosion came up to my aist as I stood there," MacKenzie id. The explosion smashed all the feboats but one. Night was closing . It was then 5.25 p.m., eastern andard time.

"When we got the one boat down e found she was half full of water om this tidal wave the explosion ew up.

"The Pink Star went down fast ight minutes it was. Some got in the life boat and the others jumped verboard in their belts. I had plenty time. I got the secret papers and weighted them and threw them overboard. Then I took a life belt, found another and got off just as she was going down."

MacKenzie paused, striking a match for his pipe.

"She reached for me, she did. I felt the suction tugging at me as though she wanted me with her, but I kept swimming. Alf Mildren, the third officer, was swimming near me. I could see the boat and the others in the water. It was very black."

MacKenzie said he swam about a bit to see if any of the others were injured.

"The steward was badly hurt about the head, a fellow the name of Seymour. He was pretty cheerful, but then all of a sudden he was gone. Another messman was hollering and crying. He went, too. It's no place for crying—the North Atlantic."

It was then that MacKenzie saw Cassidy.

"Swam up as cool as you please, saw the situation and swam away," MacKenzie said. "Had a widowed mother in New Brunswick, too."

Pretty soon MacKenzie no longer could see the lifeboat.

"I was pretty alone and it was cold. Funny, I kept thinking of my ship. Lovely little thing she was and these jerries had opened up her side like a tin can."

Fortunately the sea was fairly calm.

The captain showed me a callous on his hand from his makeshift paddle.

"Well, I had to have something to do. As long as you think you are doing something you're all right.

"It was heaven when the British man-o'-war picked us up. I was done in when they got me aboard, but three hours later I was hopping around the commander's cabin."

Most of the Pink Star survivors showed little signs of the ordeal. Three were hospitalized for injuries. MacKenzie said, "there were no Americans in the crew, to my knowledge."

10,000 STUDENTS TO STUDY DEFENSE

ATLANTA, Sept. 29.—(AP)—More than 10,000 students in southeastern colleges will be enrolled in national defense courses during the fall semester, Regional Advisor J. E. McDaniel said today.

Now in its second year, the training course program includes special studies in engineering, science and management. Last year 9,495 college students signed up for one or more of the courses.

McDaniel said that most of last year's trainees have been placed in industry and, according to reports, more than 90 per cent of them are now engaged in defense work and related fields.

The eight colleges offering special courses in the southeast are Vanderbilt, the Universities of Tennessee, Alabama and Florida, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Georgia Tech, Auburn and Mississippi State College.

Later in the school year, McDaniel said, Sewanee and the Universities of Georgia and Mississippi will offer defense courses. All participating colleges have been selected by the United States office of education.

McDaniel said college level defense training is designed to prepare qualified engineers and technicians for highly specialized posts in defense industry.

Among the courses are aeronautical, military highway and marine engineering, airport design, metallurgy, textile testing, naval architecture, topographical surveying, iron ore mining, industrial safety, paper manufacture, tool and die design, electrical maintenance and shipbuilding.

In Cromwellian times, battle pikes sometimes were 18 feet long.

PELICAN BACK ON AUTOMOBILE TAGS

Residents of Ouachita parish will be interested to learn that the pelican, official emblem of Louisiana, will be back on the automobile license tags next year. After an absence of two years, the bird goes back on the tags at the specific orders of Governor Sam H. Jones, pictured above with one of the new plates, which will be red and white. The license plates will go on sale January 2, 1942, reports Ivan W. Patterson, head of the motor vehicle section of the state revenue department. Mr. Patterson also says that this year, for the first time licenses for noncommercial private vehicles, labeled "Public," will be divided into tags for city, parish and state motor vehicles and the plates will be so marked.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

Word from Berlin that Hitler is preparing for an all-out winter campaign in Russia is giving rise to many supposed inquiries as to what he can expect to achieve in that land of terror. Blizzards, ice and mammoth snowdrifts—that is to say, as it pertains to carry on big scale operations under such conditions.

Probably a good deal of confusion over the position is due to the fact that many of us like the German overlord Napoleon in his retreat from Moscow as a reference. That does give us some guidance, but I don't think we can say that Herr Hitler with his modern equipment is confronted exactly the same proposition.

Anyway we have information that while Napoleon's invasion took place through the heart of Russia, the drive against Moscow by the Nazis at present only is fighting on the northern flank, making for the capital from the north. Now that southern area is a huge granary, chock full of foodstuffs, much needed by Russia, and we can safely say that Hitler will make the seizing of that territory one of his objectives before the winter sets in.

Throughout almost the entire length of the battle line between Leningrad and the Black sea the Russians are going to be attacking in force during the winter months. It would seem that for you will remember the Finns and Russia fought a winter campaign not so long ago, and the Finns gave the Soviet troops a terrific beating. Of course, the Finns are not to be compared to the Nazis in the matter of equipment, but the Russians have had time to profit by the lessons of the Finnish campaign.

The fall rains already have begun turning the roads into seas of mud, of which Napoleon's army got a taste. Badly. Soon now the ground in the north will be frozen as hard as concrete, and the Russian soldier will be equipped to fight on snowshoes. By January most of the rivers are frozen.

Along the Black sea, however, and across the river Don down into the Caucasus, the weather is a different proposition. The winter isn't severe or long. The southern part of the Crimea, for instance, produces flowers the year round and is known as the Russian Riviera. Over in Georgia, in the southwestern part of the Caucasus, there is a somewhat similar climate.

The Caucasus—so important because it is the gateway between Russia and Iran (Persia) and the rest of the middle east—has a variety of climate but little snow excepting in the mountains (which are many) and the air is so dry that the melting snow produces little mud to impede military operations. The northern Caucasus has a total snowfall of only about four inches on the lowlands, and north of that the fall runs from four to eight inches, excepting in the extreme south among the mountains where they have about 12 inches.

That summary of the situation in the southern zone undoubtedly is much more comfortable to the reading fan sitting out war. There will be plenty of tough going for the German armies, once rains in their drive along the Black sea and the sea of Azov to the river Don, where they have outflanked into the Caucasus. The rains and ice closing hob with transport and the mud will be terrible until the freeze begins in December.

The Germans are continuing their terrific assault in the Ukraine and against the Crimea, where, by the way, there is plenty of mud. Today Kiev report the destruction of 45,000 Red troops to be added to the more than 600,000 which Berlin previously claimed to have annihilated.

Still, despite these colossal claims, the Muscovites continue to fight. Not only that but they state this morning that they routed two Rumanian infantry brigades in a fierce battle.

MUSIC GROUP TO PAY TAX OCT. 1

New Levy Goes Into Effect After Midnight On Tuesday

All Monroe Civic Music Association tickets that are purchased on or after October 1 will require a 10 per cent tax, so that if a couple desires to purchase two tickets they will cost not $10 but an extra dollar or $11, on and after the date named.

For this reason, Mrs. C. C. Colvert, association secretary, urges that remittances be sent in so as to be postmarked not later than midnight, Tuesday.

The fact was not generally understood that this tax would be imposed and hence the explanation was not made in the letters that were sent out by Mrs. Colvert, she stated Monday.

S. A. Moss, president of the local association, received his first information on the subject on Saturday. It stated that "in the new 1941 federal tax law, the present exemption from the admissions tax accorded to civic music associations, religious, educational and charitable organizations has been eliminated.

"Therefore it will be necessary for your association to collect from each member, whether adult or student, an admissions tax of 10 per cent on all amounts paid on and after October 1."

It is urged that all persons endeavor to get their checks for season tickets in the mails by midnight Tuesday, September 30.

GENERAL MARSHALL CONGRATULATES TROOPS

WITH SECOND ARMY, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The 400,000 troops of the Second and the Third armies headed for their home stations today with praise from the army's two top-ranking generals ringing in their ears and assurance that "deficiencies in material will be made good."

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, in a congratulatory message to the troops for "a grand job," said, "the zeal and energy, the endurance and the spirit of the troops have been a model of excellence."

He said, "there is much more to learn," but promised that "the mistakes of the past two weeks will be corrected."

Lieutenant-General Lesley J. McNair, maneuver director and chief of the general army headquarters, expressed equal satisfaction in calling the war games to a halt late yesterday.

The principal material deficiencies to which General Marshall referred are weapons—principally anti-tank guns, radio sets for combat vehicles, tanks, trucks and ammunition.

Although General Marshall did not detail the "mistakes of the past two weeks," his views undoubtedly will be incorporated in the general critique General McNair has scheduled for Tuesday at Leesville, La. After the first week's problem he told officers the most glaring weakness was the state of small-unit training, the fault of officer leadership.

General McNair said "We can never be entirely satisfied with the performance of our troops, but the soldier of 1941 will give a better account of himself than the soldier of any other period in our history."

Lieutenant-General Walter Krueger and Ben Lear, commanders of the Third and Second armies, respectively, commended their men highly.

Today the soldiers rode to bivouacs, singing and cheering, and will go into concentration areas to spend a few days repairing trucks and cleaning their clothes before departing for their home stations over the country. The 40th coast artillery from Fort Sheridan, Ill., will lead the way tomorrow, passing through Memphis to cross the Mississippi river.

The OPM recently has placed priority on the securing of materials for construction of 200,000 privately financed defense housing units in special defense areas, Mr. Holland said. Already designated as special defense areas in Louisiana are Alexandria, Baton Rouge, Lake Charles, Shreveport, New Orleans and the Leesville-DeRidder areas.

added that the national legislature first should "lay down a fair yardstick for measuring normal profits and then recapture all excess profits if necessary during the present emergency."

Morgenthau suggested that the 6 per cent profit limitation be applied on the basis of invested capital for the duration of the emergency. Corporations now have the alternative of computing taxable excess profits either on the basis of invested capital or on the basis of average earnings for the years 1936-39, inclusive.

A contention that pending price control legislation was inadequate to meet inflationary trends, was contained in a study made public by the Brookings institution.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the private research organization, and Meyer Jacobstein, a staff member, were the authors of the study. They declared that prices of farm products would have to be reduced and wages controlled if rising prices were to be arrested.

without question or inquiry by any court.

Judge Ellis restrained Stanley from acting as the grand jury's legal advisor and set October 7 as the date for a hearing on a preliminary injunction. Stanley's motion demanding to be recognized as the grand jury's advisor was refused by the court.

Kemp alleged 10 different reasons why the attorney general's supersession act was assertedly invalid, saying the state constitution limits the power of the attorney general over district attorneys to merely supervisory functions.

The district attorney further said the legislative act was improperly drawn, embracing more than one object, and gave the attorney general power to supersede all district attorneys in the state, thus divesting constitutional officers of their functions.

Alternatively Kemp contended the attorney general could only supersede him for cause and that Stanley had made no charge or claim of negligence or neglect of duty on Kemp's part.

"Although the attorney general severely criticized act 24 during the campaign in which he was elected, he has none the less resorted to its provisions to supersede more district attorneys than all his predecessors in office combined." Kemp declared, adding that "it is well known that to be superseded carries with it a reflection on the character and worth of the officer so disposed" and "none of the other district attorneys who have been superseded shared the political affiliations of the attorney general."

"It is conceivable," District Attorney Kemp asserted in his petition, "that the wholesale abuse of this oppressive power is born of a hope to help a political faction rather than in the interest of the state as a whole."

MARION MILEY, GOLFER, SLAIN

the receipts totalled $145. Earlier police had found $60 in the club office.

Price said the finding of the money had not changed his theory that robbery was the motive for the crime.

Search for the slayers was spurred by the posting of a $1,000 reward by the club for information that would lead to their capture and conviction.

Earlier Detective Captain Joe Harrigan said police were "stumped" in their effort to trap the slayers.

Harrigan called the crime "probably the most sensational murder case" on record in the Bluegrass, while Investigation Superintendent Guy W. Maupin termed the tragedy "a plain case of robbery," possibly committed by amateur bandits.

The Philadelphia-born Miss Miley was shot through the head and chest, and her mother, Mrs. Fred Miley, 50, was hit three times in the abdomen, after being roused early yesterday morning by two robbers at their country club apartment demanding location of the money.

Mrs. Miley, club manager, stumbled through the darkened white-columned building to a sanatorium 300 yards away from where police were called. She was taken to a hospital where the three slugs were removed. She fell into a coma shortly after giving police a sketchy account of events.

Patrolman John Doyle, first to reach Mrs. Miley's side, said she told him she was awakened by the efforts of two men to break down her apartment door.

Doyle recounted that Mrs. Miley told him the men asked her where the receipts from Saturday night's dance were located. She told them, whereupon one of the men struck her in the head with a window weight, knocking her down, and then fired three shots into her body.

Miss Miley rushed from her room to lend aid to her mother, Doyle reported, and was shot down. Her pajama-clad body was found in the hallway.

Harrigan theorized that the shooting and robbery may have been committed by persons familiar with the set-up at the swanky building and grounds. He said the electric switches had been turned off and the telephone lines disserviced.

The only clues available, Harrigan said, were two buttons from a man's coat, three slugs from a .32 caliber automatic and several fingerprints on the wall near the Miley's apartment.

Fred Miley, husband of the wounded woman and a golf professional at the Maketewah Country club at Cincinnati, hurried here after being told of an "accident" at the Lexington club. Miley said there was no nightwatchman at the Lexington club, although he frequently had advised the employment of one.

Public reaction was sharp here, where the Mileys are popular figures in golfing and social circles.

Senator Chandler, Democrat, Kentucky, urged state police to spare no effort to apprehend the slayers. Miss Miley, a prominent golfer for the past decade, has won numerous tournaments, including the Women's Western Open, Southern and Trans-Mississippi. She was champion of Kentucky six times.

IN RUSSIA HE LOOKS LIKE THIS

What a difference a couple of years can make on the face of Adolf Hitler. When he arrived all-conquering in Poland he was beaming, top photo. But today in Russia he matches the forlorn, frustrated expressions of his military chiefs. New picture at bottom shows him with Generals Keitel, left, and von Brauchitsch at headquarters somewhere on the eastern front.

KILLS SELF BECAUSE 3 DAUGHTERS SMOKE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—(AP)—A 55-year-old widower, who had reared three daughters, killed himself last night, Detective Daniel O'Mahoney said, because he saw the girls smoking cigarettes.

The father, Elia Taddi, was found dead of a bullet wound in the heart in his home. A pistol lay nearby.

O'Mahoney said the daughters, Rose, 24, Adeline, 22, and Dolores, 20, whom Taddi had reared through their teens, related their father had been distressed when he saw them smoking yesterday in a store.

"He never suspected we smoked," one of the girls said.

BODIES OF THREE ARMY FLIERS FOUND

LAWTON, Okla., Sept. 29.—(AP)—The bodies of three army fliers were found today amid the wreckage of an observation plane, which had been missing for 12 hours.

Colonel Ira A. Koenig, commanding air corps troops at Fort Sill, previously had identified the missing men as Second Lieutenant R. A. McNabb, Sweetwater, Tenn., the pilot; Captain O. C. Appleton, Highland, Tex., and Private James D. Smith, Midlothian, Tex.

The plane, belonging to the 15th Observation squadron, left Hensley Field, Tex., at 7 p.m. yesterday for Fort Sill, its base.

FOUR MAINLAND TOWNS HIT IN 9-CITY ATTACK

worked out the program in a two-day session in Baghdad, it was disclosed.

The Italian high command acknowledged a toll of 11 persons killed and 55 wounded as R. A. F. bombers pounded four Italian mainland cities, four in Sicily and the island city of Rhodes. In addition, two persons were killed in blackouts.

London dispatches said the R. A. F. left great fires raging in Genoa and at other points in Northern Italy.

The R. A. F. avoided Rome—despite earlier expectations that the Fascist capital might be bombed in reprisal for an axis attack on Cairo, holy city of the Moslem world—but showered high explosive bombs and incendiaries on Genoa, Spezia, Turin and Savona Marina on the Italian mainland. Some of the casualties were at a fifth mainland city, Milan, but the injuries and fatalities were from anti-aircraft shells and traffic accidents.

Also attacked were the Sicilian towns of Palermo, Trapani, Marsala and Castel Vetrano, and the Italian island of Rhodes in the eastern Mediterranean.

One R. A. F. plane was reported shot down by anti-aircraft fire at Turin, with the crew of five killed.

Reports from Bern said large numbers of planes passed over Switzerland during the night, indicating that the raiders flew over the Alps from Britain on a 1,200-mile round trip journey.

In the Russian campaign, now in its 15th week, Soviet dispatches reported the rout of two German-allied Rumanian infantry brigades in bitter fighting on the southern (Ukraine) front, with more than 2,500 Rumanians killed, and declared that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's Red armies on the central front had recaptured 10 more villages in a drive from Yelnya to Smolensk.

Soviet troops were reported to have hurled the Germans from three lines of trenches and crossed the Desna river, advancing on a six-mile front.

Around siege-girt Leningrad, in the north, Soviet front-line reports said the city's defenders were "attacking incessantly, then driving forward without respite."

A Russian correspondent telegraphed from behind the siege lines that "we have already cracked the enemy's advance."

Advices reaching London said that German warplanes were violently blasting railroads and highways on the Crimea peninsula, key to control of Black sea waters, but that Nazi troops were making little if any progress in attempts to cross the four-mile-wide Perekop isthmus.

Behind this gateway to the Crimea, the Russians were declared to be holding stoutly, wiping out German parachute troops and shelling the Germans to a standstill behind a vast death-trap of mine-fields at the isthmus bottleneck.

Adolf Hitler's high command, silent on the Crimea operations, reported that German and Italian troops had out-flanked and destroyed three Soviet divisions—about 45,000 men—in a battle northeast of the Nazi-held city of Dnieperopetrovsk.

The high command said the Russians, caught in swampy terrain, suffered heavy and bloody losses, with 13,000 Red troops taken prisoners so far.

Meanwhile, authorized quarters in Berlin denied Germany was attempting peace "feelers" or negotiations, countering rumors that the Reich was contacting the French or Turkish governments in that respect.

"Fairy tales . . . especially at a time when Germany is on an unexampled march to victory," a Nazi spokesman said.

Heavy naval action marked the war's developments over the weekend.

Premier Mussolini's high command asserted that torpedo-firing Italian planes sank three British cruisers in an attack on a convoy in the central Mediterranean. A battleship, another large ship, a destroyer and six smaller ships also were damaged, the Italians reported.

Presumably describing the same action, the London admiralty said an important convoy had been successfully taken through the central Mediterranean "despite consistent attacks by the enemy air force."

A single ship in the convoy was damaged so badly it had to be scuttled, the admiralty said, and one of the escorting British warships suffered slight damage.

Moscow reported that seven German ships had been sunk or damaged, including a cruiser, three destroyers, two transports and a tanker, while the Germans countered with a claim that Nazi shore batteries set a Russian cruiser afire and that dive-bombers hit a Soviet battleship near Kronstadt naval base, guarding the sea approach to Leningrad.

In the grim back-stage struggle of the war theater, Germany clamped down with eight firing-squad executions in an attempt to crush bitter manifestations of revolt in the conquered countries.

Two more persons were put to death in Paris for possessing forbidden weapons, Berlin announced, and six were shot in the German protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia, in former Czechoslovakia.

While the Russians said they were putting on a counter-attacking defense of Leningrad and holding the Germans back from the Crimea, British and American aid missions settled down to business in Moscow with a Russian delegation.

The three-power talks are designed to formulate a program of long-term aid from Britain and the United States to Russia in the war against Adolf Hitler.

The Germans said "numerous places" were bombed by the R. A. F. in western Germany but declared the civilian population suffered only limited losses.

In the battle of the Atlantic, Germany announced 12 merchantmen totaling 67,000 tons and an escorting warship were sunk in attacks on a convoy between Gibraltar and England and a 12,000-ton tanker was sunk in the south Atlantic.

Italy surrendered one of the last pockets of resistance in Ethiopia when the 4,000-man garrison at Gondar gave up to the British. The London war office said only about 10,000 troops were still resisting in the Gondar section of Ethiopia.

In the far east, a series of diplomatic moves indicated that Britain was still far from satisfied that the crisis involving Japan's expansionist program was over.

In Tokyo, the British embassy announced that Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie had indefinitely postponed a projected three-month vacation trip to the United States, on instructions from London.

In Canberra, Australia, it was announced that the entire situation in the Pacific would be discussed when upon the arrival of the Australian minister to Tokyo, Sir John Greig Latham, now en route home by way of Singapore.

Alfred Duff Cooper, Britain's special coordinator for the far east, was expected to accompany Latham from Singapore and join in the conference.

All members of the Japanese cabinet except Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye attended a Tokyo luncheon given by the German ambassador, Eugen Ott, and the Italian ambassador, Mario Indelli, celebrating the first anniversary of Japan's entry into the Rome-Berlin alliance.

Ott declared he was struck by the "warm feeling" of the Japanese for the triple alliance, although the Japanese government had closely restricted celebrations.

On the Sino-Japanese war front, a Chinese military spokesman reported that the Japanese had lost at least 20,000 troops out of the 80,000 thrown into a major drive on Changsha, Hunan province capital, and that Japanese siege forces were still being held seven miles outside the city.

The Japanese army announced Saturday that Changsha had been captured and that Japanese troops were pushing on 22 miles to the south.

press and our guests and a few hundred assorted by-gone celebrities of the game made merry in such determined fashion that the bill to the management of the two clubs would seem to have been no less than $50,000 each time. The joint "Press Headquarters" spread all over the Commodore's mezzanine with rare viands and exotic delicacies at the call of a great horde of friends of the baseball management. And from somewhere there appeared not merely bottles or cases but stacks of cases of veritable pre-war stimulants to which we all addressed ourselves in that pathetic and unforgettable greediness of the time when every true American tried to drink his fill in the belief that the chance would never come again.

John McGraw had personal headquarters in the old Waldorf from which, in the late hours, old friends of the little Napoleon would come hurtling, bruised and disheveled, like bums out of a barrel house. He was a man of unpredictable moods who had parted the hair of an old friend with a decanter one night in the Lambs' and broken another friend's leg when that one went to placate him, so anyone who made merry with McGraw assumed all the risk.

Captain Til Huston, the social partner of the Yankee firm, had personal quarters in the Martinique, but Colonel Jake Ruppert and Ed G. Barrow, the business manager, merely dropped in, saluted their guests and quietly vanished on big business.

In 1923, the social program was greatly reduced and, while economy may have been a reason, I am willing to believe that the hosts had come to the conclusion that their hospitality was getting their guests down. Or perhaps, in that early stage of prohibition, they had an apprehension that someone might walk out a window looking for the second door on the left and bring scandal on the great national game.

The most hysterical public demonstration of all occurred in Washington in 1924 when Bucky Harris won his first pennant for Clark Griffith. This one was hard to account for except on the grounds of innocent enthusiasm for Washington, where congress dwelt under the baleful eye of the Methodist Vatican, was extra dry and hardly anyone really lives there to the extent of a rooting interest in the town.

Nevertheless, the frenzies rivaled those of either Armistice and thousands of citizens made fools of themselves far beyond midnight on nothing stronger than coffee. Mr. Griffith abhorred intoxicants from honest convictions and provided no bar but each working press ticket was accompanied by a series of coupons, one for each day, which, presented at a certain room in a certain hotel, somehow entitled bearer to one imperial quart. It has become a binding tradition now to ossify the press and sundry and this pretty custom continued on down to repeal when temptation, or, anyway, opportunity, appeared on every hand, at popular prices.

To be sure, we also had ball games, but I am dealing with a side of the great national gala which was far more exciting and on which I now believe the statute of limitations may reasonably be said to have run. Much as our public envied us our seats in the working press, still more would the people of the United States of America have pined to join us when we threw off the cares of high office to make fellowship.

BATON WIELDERS NAMED FOR BAND

Noyes Rose and B. Francis are wielding the baton over the Northeast Junior College band this season, stated Director Harry Lemett. Both are experienced drum majors, having had similar experiences last year.

Mr. Lemett stated that the band is showing up better this season that was the case a year ago. However, he needs two bass players and two for wood wind and marimba. Also a player for the glockenspiel is needed.

There will be a practice given band members in the Fine Arts building at the college Thursday at 7:30 p.m. An invitation is given to more members who desire to be added to the band.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Cotton futures gained as much as $1.55 a bale before realizing and increased hedge pressure pared the advance today.

Short covering, buying by Wall Street and mill interests contributed to the advance under the incentive of expectations of an increased parity price for cotton, the payment of an additional 2½ cents subsidy on Canadian shipments and renewed talk of a southern holding movement developing as a result of the recent decline.

Prague, Bruena, Maehrisch-Ostrau, Klando, Koenigradz and Olmuetz.

The "hostile acts" to which Heydrich referred were not specified, but passive resistance of the Czechs has frequently been a source of trouble to the Germans since Hitler dismembered the Czecho-Slovak republic in March, 1939.

(Reports from the fugitive government in London said increasing sabotage had slowed the output of munitions factories in the former Czecho-Slovak republic as much as 50 per cent. Peasants were said to be burning granaries in night raids, and forming for hunger marches by day. Saboteurs also were reported to have wrecked a number of German troop trains and disrupted communications.)

Once before—in November, 1939—the Germans established a state of emergency in Bohemia-Moravia, declaring martial law in five districts after student demonstrations which led to bitter clashes. Black-uniformed S. S. troops occupied Prague university buildings on that occasion, arrested hundreds of students and executed a number as an example.

Heydrich, who is 37 and known as one of the best fencers in Europe, has a reputation for straightening things out to suit German authorities in abrupt but thorough fashion.

He was dispatched to Bohemia-Moravia following a short visit to Norway, where the Germans decreed a state of civil siege on September 10—shortly after his arrival—to halt the spread of strikes and sabotage.

SIX PERSONS SHOT ON HEYDRICH'S ORDERS

LONDON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Six persons were shot yesterday in execution of the first death sentences ordered by Reinhard Heydrich, new Reich's protector for Bohemia-Moravia, the German radio said today in a broadcast heard by Reuters.

FOOD SUPPLY PROBLEM IS SEEN IN RUSSIA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Soviet Russia may be confronted with a "serious food supply" problem, the agriculture department reported today, because of the Nazi occupation of a large part of the Ukraine and the offensive against the Crimean peninsula.

Both regions are important surplus producing areas in southern Russia.

Publication of the report by a governmental agency here was seen as an indication that the United States may be called upon to supply food deficiencies to Russia.

A mass meeting of lived coal miners was called at Coaldale, Pa., for this afternoon to reconsider an agreement designed to end a strike of 22,000 members of the United Mine Workers of America who are protesting increased dues and assessments. The miners declined to ratify the agreement at a meeting Sunday.

Ballots were being counted today to determine whether more than 3,000 workers will call a strike in 16 leading Washington hotels over a wage dispute between two American Federation of Labor unions and the hotels. The unions have demanded a wage increase ranging from 10 to 25 per cent while the hotels countered with an offer of a flat 10 per cent pay boost.

DOXEY TAKES SENATE OATH

4, to fill the vacancy in the Second congressional district represented by Doxey. Ira L. "Shine" Morgan of Oxford and District Attorney Jamie Whitten of Charleston already have indicated they would be candidates.

It appeared today that actually Doxey's majority was only 676 votes, because of an error Secretary of State Walker Wood said apparently had been made in the certification of returns from Perry county.

Wood said the total vote certified to him from the Perry county election commission gave Collins 235 votes and Doxey 306, but that addition of the vote by precincts as certified to him showed 306 votes in the Collins column and 235 for Doxey, the same vote listed on the final unofficial tabulation.

Had this affected the outcome, Wood said he would have made an investigation to determine the correct vote, but since it did not materially change the result, he had accepted and recorded the totals as certified to him by the commission.

The final unofficial tabulation of the vote by the Associated Press gave Doxey a 647-vote majority.

LOU NOVA TAKES SHOT AT RING CROWN TONIGHT

NG CHAMPION ACES ONE OF TOUGHEST FOES

tting Favors Louis To Retain Title In 15-Round Go Tonight

By Gayle Talbot

EW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Joe is, of the blasting fists, and Lou a, a rugged, courageous specimen n California, clash at 9 o'clock tral standard time, tonight at the o Grounds in a 15-round heavy-ght championship fight that prom-to leave 60,000 spectators limp.

his is one battle that scarcely can r Opinion is divided sharply on probable winner, but there seems doubt in anyone's mind that it will a cruel, spectacular engagement ile it lasts.

his is one of the few times that big negro, Louis, has met a man equal in physical equipment, fight-heart and absolute confidence e he won the title from Jim Brad-k in 1937. Offhand, only Max meling among the many who have llenged Louis and taken their tings appeared on the surface to e as good a chance as Nova against famous Bomber.

lova belongs in there tonight on his ord. He knocked out Max Baer ce, among other things, and had mmy Farr on the verge of a knock-in the closing rounds of their ap. Only some peculiar interfer-e by the referee saved Tommy, o shortly before that had breezed ounds against Louis.

The one time Nova ever was beaten a professional was the night he mbed into the ring, a sick man, inst Tony Galento in Philadelphia. got it good that night, what with illness, Tony's rough tactics and eferee who looked on with amused erance.

The bookmakers do not share No-'s confidence in his destiny. At last eck-up they were offering a bonus 13 to 5 that he catches a licking m Louis. Anyone wanting to bet the champion was asked to put up to win $a. It is one of the biggest tting lights, they say, since the days Jack Dempsey.

Huge Crowd Is Expected For World Series Opener

High-Spots Of Baseball's 1941 Campaign Presented

After 1,231 Games, Gus H. Fan Should Know Some Of Following

By Bill Boni
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Except for the little matter of the world series, which is being discussed in columns other than this, the big league baseball season ended yesterday. After 1,231 ball games (it would have been 1,232 but for that Cardinal-Giant tie) you, Gus H. Fan, should know something about the national pastime.

The following questions will hit some of the year's high-spots. Score yourself five points for each one answered correctly.

1. Who is the American League's sixth .400-hitter, what was his final average, and who were his predecessors in this august group?

2. How many 20-game winning pitchers were there in the majors this year? How many also won 20 or more in 1940?

3. Identify (a) Eddie Boazley; (b) Dave Koslo; (c) Bill Clemensen; (d) Bob Chipman.

4. Name the National and American League rookie pitchers who won 19 games each.

5. On what date did (a) the Yankees and (b) the Dodgers clinch their pennants? How many games in front were they in the final standings?

6. Who pitched the only no-hit game, and what effect did it have on the league standings?

7. Which team set a new league record for double plays and also tied the major league mark? When did they do it?

8. Which American League pitcher made the season's most notable comeback after selling his club president on just that bill of goods?

9. Who are the unofficial batting champions, and whom did they succeed? Who are the home run kings? Runs-batted-in leaders?

10. On what day of the season was the order of finish in the American League decided?

And here are your answers:

1. Ted Williams of the Red Sox; 406. Nap Lajoie, Ty Cobb, George Sisler, Joe Jackson, Harry Heilman.

2. Four: Whit Wyatt and Kirby Higbe, 22 each for the Dodgers in the National; Bob Feller, 25 for the Indians; Thornton Lee, 22 for the White Sox. Feller, with 27 in 1940 was the lone repeater.

3. Beazley, rookie up from New Orleans, pitched the Cards to a final 2-1 triumph over the Cubs; Koslo, Giant rookie, held the Braves to six hits for a 2-1 victory; Clemensen, Pittsburgh rookie, halted the Reds, 3-2, checking Bucky Walters' bid for his 26th win after three years at or over that figure; Chipman, up from Atlanta, got credit for the Dodgers' 5-1 victory over the Phils in his first big league effort.

4. Elmer Riddle, who ran up an 11-straight streak for the Reds and finished with 19 and 4. Hugh (Dicky) Newsome, whose freshman record with the Red Sox was 19 and 10.

5. (a) On September 4, record early date for pennant, the September 25 date being next-to-last of the season (b) The Yanks led by 17 games in front, Brooklyn two and a half.

6. Lonnie Warneke on August 30, to put the Cardinals in first place for the last time. Brooklyn regaining the top for keeps on September 4.

7. The Yankees with 194, the last of which they got while dropping a 5-0 decision to the Washington Senators yesterday.

8. Lefty Grove of the Yanks, who won 15 games after having been good for only three in 1940.

9. Williams, who succeeded the Yanks' Joe DiMaggio and the Dodgers' Pete Reiser, who succeeded Debs Garms. Williams again and Brooklyn's Dolph Camilli in runs batted in.

10. The last day, when the White Sox seized up to put place the Tigers and Indians fourth and fifth, and the Browns and Senators tied for sixth.

That's all, folks, will be all until 1942. See you then.

MEHRE IS WORRIED OVER REBS' MORALE

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Sept. 29.—(AP)—Coach Harry Mehre started his Mississippi Rebels working on their Southeastern Conference opening assignment with a lecture on the need for fight if they hoped to win a Georgetown football game on their program.

"They were pretty low after the game," he said. "They got a taste of defeat and need a game on which they can get back on the right track."

Both the Georgetown touchdowns were scored after the Rebels had driven deep into the Hoyas' territory.

"We have got to quit kicks on both those plays," said Mehre.

"On one of them, Hyer got over the goal line standing. He was pushed back and then a Georgetown player took the ball out of the hands and carried it over the goal. Hyer thought he had scored and the referee thought he had. But the officials didn't know his and ruled the ball dead."

The Georgetown game with the ball rescued from second week because the Rebels were doing anything, then he turned on for a touchdown.

The second time, Hayes fumbled and a Georgetown player picked it up and ran for a touchdown. We had the ball for the greater part of the game, have been more than a match for them. If we can get the ground and the rebounds, don't see

EXPECT 70,000 FANS WILL JAM YANK STADIUM

Ticket-Seekers May Form Line Today For Wednesday's Tilt

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The boisterous Brooklyn Dodgers and staid New York Yankees focused their full attention on the world series today, even if a lot of this town's sports fans did not.

Since the baseball classic does not get under way until Wednesday, the sports spotlight was turned on tonight's heavyweight title fight between Joe Louis and Lou Nova at the Polo Grounds, right across the Harlem river from Yankee stadium.

But the champions of the National and American leagues went about the business of preparing for their own world's championship struggle. Both teams scheduled workouts at the stadium, and the Dodgers arranged to ride in a late-afternoon parade in Brooklyn as the borough officially and elaborately celebrated the Brooks' first pennant in 21 years.

This monster demonstration was expected to excite the Dodgers' fabulous followers to such peaks of enthusiasm that the entire squad of Brooklyn players moved into a Manhattan hotel last night in order to get some rest and relaxation before the big show starts.

The same expectation that Brooklyn's baseball fanatics wouldn't be able to wait till opening day to set out for the series prompted police to assign a small detail of patrolmen to Yankee stadium last night, 48 hours ahead of their precious plans.

The 28,000 unreserved and bleacher seats still available at the stadium will not go on sale till Wednesday morning but a line of fans is expected to start forming at almost any hour now. Police said the early arrivals could bring chairs or stools, but would not be permitted to "camp out" with tents, cots, stoves or other paraphernalia.

All box and reserved seats at the stadium have been sold out for several weeks, and a crowd of about 70,000, largest in series history, is expected to see the first game. A crowd of similar size will see the second game in the stadium Thursday, and then the scene will shift to Ebbets field, which seats only 32,000, for contests Friday, Saturday and Sunday. If a sixth and seventh games are necessary they will be played at the stadium next Monday and Wednesday.

All games will start at 12:30 p.m. central standard time, except the Sunday contest, which will not begin until 1 p.m., because of New York law.

The practices today were expected to be routine affairs, with authoritative announcement of the first game pitchers probably being delayed until the teams work out again tomorrow.

It is agreed generally that the opening hurler will be 35-year-old Whit Wyatt for the Dodgers, a right-hander with 22 victories, and 36-year-old Charley (Red) Ruffing for the Yankees, a right-hander with 15 triumphs. However, it is not the names of the starting pitchers for the series that has stimulated all the guessers. It is their relative effectiveness.

The Dodgers have two pitchers who have won 22 games, Wyatt and Higbe, while the top level for the Yankees this season was 15 for Ruffing and Lefty Gomez. Chiefly on this comparison the Dodgers have been accorded a theoretical advantage on the mound. But little mention has been made of the fact that Ruffing and Gomez have been in only 23 games apiece while Wyatt has been in 38 and Higbe in 45 including several relief appearances.

Another Yankee standby, Spud Chandler, has won just 10 games, but he has started only 19 and thus, because of Manager Joe McCarthy's notation of a half-dozen or more pitchers hasn't had much chance to be a 20-game winner.

On the other hand, considerable importance has been given the fact that the Yankees have had a long rest since clinching their pennant, while the Dodgers have had to drive almost to the finish. This argument may have been overworked, too, because Brooklyn will have had approximately a week's relaxation before the series starts and even during the heat of the season with the St. Louis Cardinals none of the pitchers ever were rushed much. There was nothing like the late Dizzy Dean pitched three games in the final week.

STICKY GIFT ENJOYED

CUSHING, Okla., Sept. 29.—(AP)—Ed Harmon, a Cushing negro, had eaten a red candy kit sent by confined to friends, and so he bought him a huge one. He stood in front of a cafe and consumed it in the conventional manner and reported for work the next time in his 36 years of living. Quite a crowd gathered.

RUFFING

Charles Herbert Ruffing will open the World Series for the Yankees as usual at the Stadium, Wednesday. Red Ruffing, 36, won five and lost one pitching in seven games in five world series.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Going way out on an overloaded limb, this dept. hereby picks Louis to knock out Nova in 10 rounds, or less. . . . All right, maybe Joe has slipped a little, but in 54 fights the only guy that ever suffered him was Schmeling and the only one who has come near to licking him lately was Conn. . . . No, a isn't a Conn or even a Schmeling when it comes to defending himself, so even if Joe can't toss a punch quite as fast as he used to he's going to hit Lou and hit him hard . . . That's usually enough. . . . If it isn't, Joe isn't had at avoiding a sock on the lug and we don't think he'll take enough of them to go down before Nova does.

MONDAY MATINEE

Louis turned down a ticket to his own fight the other day with the remark, I won't need a seat. I expect to be on my feet all of the time." . . . Buck (Louisville Times) Weaver, who predicted Whirlaway would lose at Narragansett but picked the wrong horse to beat him, recalls Ben Jones said last spring that Whirlaway would win a lot of races and lose some, too. . . . It seems the public expected him to win 'em all . . . Boys' wear, men's wear and five Brooklyn Dodgers was the elevator boys' cry the other day when some of den bums spent a day off autographing baseballs in a Manhattan department store. . . . When Sec Taylor of the Des Moines Register and Cy Peterman of the Philadelphia Inquirer were driving out to one of the fight camps a couple days ago, they discovered that when Cy was on the wrestling team at the U. of Wisconsin, Sec used to referee his matches. . . . Don't worry about Pete Reiser's arm. Dr. Frank Glenn, who was called in to look it over when it first snapped, asked Pete how he felt and then decided to stay and see the ball game before going to the hospital for X-rays. . . . The bosses that ran in the Futurity at Belmont Saturday went through three townships from the starting line to the finish. . . . But that wasn't anything compared with what the bettors went through.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Tom Sweeney, Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette: "He's a true Brooklynite. If he curses the Dodgers as wildly as he cheers 'em. . . . If he thinks that the greatest and most colorful player who ever lived was the Babe—only he means Herman not Ruth . . . If his idea of paradise is herring for supper and a newspaper telling how the home team and Dazzy was thrown out of the game."

SHORT SHORT STORY

A little more than a year ago Tramer George Washington Carroll was broke and friends gave him a hand until he caught on with Lou Tufano's stable . . . One of the first things he did after getting the job was to recommend the purchase of Marketwise and a couple of other cheap colts . . . And the next thing he did when Marketwise made the dough come rolling in was to look up his pals and repay all they'd advanced to him.

CLEANING THE CUFF

On a radio quiz program Saturday when a man missed his answer, the M. C. said if he'd make a one-minute speech knocking the Dodgers he'd get a free ticket to the series . . . The guy walked right off with the hate announcement that he wouldn't knock the Dodgers for 50 tickets. . . . Ed Danforth of the Atlanta Journal, who had the courage to predict Vanderbilt might knock over Purdue, added, "If they do that little thing, don't nominate them for the Rose Bowl, either." . . . Stan Stasica, the South Carolina sash who licked North Carolina, is a brother of Leo Stasica, ex-Colorado flash. And he comes from the same town as his coach, Rex Enright. . . . If the Yanks win the world series it will be Joe McCarthy's sixth championship, busting Connie Mack's record.

DAWSON SILENT ABOUT CHANGE

Won't Say Whether Or Not Wave Has Abandoned Power Football

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Reticent Red Dawson was the only man in town today who wasn't expressing his views on two burning questions—Has Tulane abandoned reliance on power football and does trouncing Boston college mean a return to greatness after a lean 1940 season?

The ease with which the Wave washed over the Sugar Bowl champions hardly surprised the spectators more than the manner in which the Tulanes completed passes, slipped "T" plays in among their single wings, and generally acted like 11 Houdinis.

In past years Tulane has operated merely by pushing people down and walking over them. When the other people didn't push easily, Tulane didn't operate. Just a week ago Coach Dawson told the Monday quarterbacks' club his team wouldn't pass "if we can make a first down without throwing the ball around."

He told them also he didn't have the personnel for the "T," and was just "brushing up" in practice because Boston college used it.

Reminded of this today, he remarked, "You don't think we're going to reveal our strategy the Monday before a game, do you?"

As to whether Saturday's tactics represented a permanent departure from custom, he said only: "We'll do in any game what we think best."

"The boys looked pretty good for a first game," he admitted. "If they keep on playing like that we ought to be pretty good."

A member of the team said Dawson told his quarterbacks to open up and throw passes, but "he's told us that before."

"When we'd try a couple and they wouldn't work the quarterbacks would get discouraged," he said. "Saturday they kept working.

"We went in there all hopped up to win and Boston college was over-confident. But we don't know what it means because they might have been overrated. So I hope we don't get overconfident now because we'll have a hard time with Auburn next week."

SLUGGER HEEDS VET'S COUNSEL

Williams Takes Duffy's Advice, Keeps Taking His Cuts

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Way back in 1894 the greatest hitter of all time refused to back into the batting championship. Today his favorite pupil has won the American league batting title with a .406 average because he listened to the master.

The greatest sweatsmith, of course, was little Hugh Duffy, who fashioned that eternal .438 average the hard way. They wanted Hughie to quit to protect his stupendous mark but the "Duff" said "no" and went up and took his cuts. He didn't hurt the average and it's secure in every baseball record book.

Ted Williams, the willowy walloper of the Red Sox and the pride and joy of that same Duffy, boasted a .405 average as the Boston team pulled into Philadelphia for the final three games of the year.

Sane voices told Ted to sit the rest of it out. He was home free with .405 and he'd be the first American leaguer to do it since Harry Heilman fashioned a .403 average in 1923. In fact, he'd be the first big leaguer to turn the trick since Bill Terry hit .401 in 1930.

Hugh isn't the kind of a guy who'll settle for a tie. It's a safe bet that what he told Ted in substance was:

"Look, kid, if you do this, you'll do it right. Go up there and take your cuts. If you miss, you don't deserve it."

Ted went up Saturday and managed to eke out one hit in four trips. His average zoomed below .400 for the first time since July 25. The future was black—for everyone but Ted Williams and Hugh Duffy.

Yesterday there was a double header and Ted stepped to the plate for the first time. He belted one out and it was a hit. That happened four times in a row and only a very ponderous decision by the scorer robbed him of the fifth. Four for five is good batting in any game.

The second tilt started. Ted collected two for three in that one. It was six for eight altogether and the average rushed up from that .39955 to .406.

PARKER FACES CHAPMAN HERE

Nashville Grappler Makes Return To Local Mat After Year's Absence

Allen Parker, colorful Nashville wrestler, returns to the Monroe arena after a year's absence tomorrow night when he meets Les Chapman of Chicago in the semi-final bout on the weekly mat program which will feature an engagement between Rex Mobley, light-heavyweight champion, and Herbie "Dutch" Schultz, the Flying Dutchman, from Milwaukee, Wis.

Despite the fact that the Mobley-Schultz battle gets top rating on the night's program, the Parker-Chapman battle is an important one, according to Promoter Gus Kallio.

Parker, who has been chasing Jack Curtis, national junior light-heavyweight champ, over the South in quest of a crack at Curtis' crown, has been promised a title match with Curtis if he can whip Chapman tomorrow.

Promoter Kallio said a title match with Curtis had not been assured but that he felt he could make the match provided Parker gave a good account of himself.

The Tennessean proved himself quite a capable grappler in appearances here during the summer a year ago and he is said to have improved considerably.

The Mobley-Schultz battle is expected to be another of those rough-house battles that can always be expected when a pair of meanies of their caliber get together. Both Mobley and Schultz have no respect for ring ethics and anything goes with them.

The main event will have a 90-minute time limit, two falls to win, and the curtain-raiser, scheduled to begin at 8:30 o'clock, will have an hour time limit, also two falls to win. Aldin "Butch" Martin will referee.

DIXIE GRID RACE OPENS THIS WEEK

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 29.—(AP)—The Dixie conference, with the Chattanooga Moccasins generally placed in the favorite role will open its season this week when Howard meets Spring Hill.

The Moccasins, who are co-champions with Mississippi college, showed an effective scoring punch in lacing Tennessee Tech, 36 to 19, Friday, but the Millsaps Majors have come through two non-conference tilts without being scored on.

Centenary fell beneath the Majors, 20 to 0, on September 20 and Louisiana college went down, 19 to 0, last week-end.

Howard has played only one game so far, losing to Auburn, 13 to 0, but displaying a stubborn defense. Spring Hill trounced Livingston Tech, 10 to 0. Centre defeated Mississippi college, 14 to 7, and Mercer was overwhelmed by Georgia of the Southeastern conference, 81 to 0, in the other games last week-end.

The Howard-Spring Hill duel is the only conference game this week, but other matches will send Millsaps against Memphis Teachers, Chattanooga against Georgia Tech, Southwestern against Mississippi and Mississippi college against Union university.

WEEK'S CARD IN SOUTHEAST IS TOUGH ONE

Two Of Loop Grid Favorites Face Conference Competition

ATLANTA, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The big fireworks will begin exploding all around the Southwestern conference camps this week-end, two of the favorites facing loop competition and two others tackling strong opposition in other circuits.

Tennessee's defending conference champions are seeking their 34th straight regular-season victory, this time at the expense of the Duke Blue Devils at Durham, N. C. Sharing honors with this classic are favored Alabama's test with Mississippi State at Tuscaloosa and powerful Tulane's engagement with Auburn at New Orleans.

The Louisiana State Tigers will be on the road for an argument with the strong Texas Longhorns at Austin.

The Tennessee Vols rested last week after an early-season 32-6 victory over Furman. Duke, seeking evenge for Tennessee's 13-0 triumph last year, opened last week by walloping Wake Forest, 43-14.

Tulane's versatile Greenies are fresh from a 21-7 victory over Boston college's Sugar Bowl champions. Auburn warmed up by subduing Howard college, 13-0.

Mississippi State is seeking its second straight conference win, a week after trimming Florida 6-0 on Blondy Black's 45-yard punt return. The Alabama Tide put on a parade of flashy backs in thumping Southwestern Louisiana, 47-6, in its opener last week.

Some eyes will be turned upon Georgia's Saturday night test with South Carolina at Athens, Ga., to see if the former's 81-0 victory over Mercer last week was only a flash in the pan. The Bulldogs ran wild, even with second and third stringers in action. They'll be meeting an eleven that upset North Carolina last Saturday, 13-7.

Kentucky, starting with a 37-14 decision over V. P. I., will tackle another Southern conference team in Washington and Lee at Lexington, Va., Saturday. Otherwise, other Southeastern teams will be getting minor tests. Tampa will furnish opposition to Florida in a night game at Gainesville, Southwestern (Memphis) will invade Mississippi and Vanderbilt will open their season against Chattanooga in Atlanta.

The Vandy Commodores gave the Southeastern a second intersectional triumph last week by trimming Purdue, 3-0, on Jack Jenkins' 20-yard field goal. L. S. U. lost one, 19-13, to Holy Cross, and Mississippi bowed to Georgetown, 16-6.

Georgia Tech was idle.

AIRMEN OBJECT TO DIRTY SHIP

Thousand Stalk Off Transport Because Of Conditions Aboard

OTTAWA, Sept. 29.—(AP)—A thousand Canadian-trained empire airmen stalked off a transatlantic transport recently because of conditions they found aboard, and the air ministry here, acknowledging they had room for complaint, promised today "there need be no fear of any repetition of the unfortunate incident."

Canadians, New Zealanders and Australians were involved in the affair, which came to light last night when Air Minister C. G. Power announced that all but "a couple hundred" of the airmen reboarded the ship and now have arrived overseas.

Those left behind, he said, caught another ship a short time later after being nominally disciplined with a reduction in pay.

"The first airmen who went aboard didn't like what they saw," Power said. "They found the ship dirty, they objected to the sleeping arrangements, they doubted that the food would be good.

"A number of them walked ashore again and spread the word among those who had not yet gone aboard. Some listened, and some didn't. In the end, not 1,000 but a couple of hundred airmen were left on the dock when the ship sailed at the scheduled hour with more than two-thirds of the contingent aboard. . . .

"We recognized that they had grounds for complaint about the accommodations, but we cannot sympathize with their means of expressing it. They were ordered aboard, and they disobeyed that order, and so, after a court of inquiry, they were disciplined. . . .

"But it can be said that the conduct of the disobedient men, apart from their courteous but firm refusal to sail under the conditions provided, was exemplary, and this was taken into account when discipline was imposed."

Power admitted the ship was "dirty and untidy," that it was a case where corrective measures were urgently demanded and that this view was being put "very strongly" before London authorities.

"This ship was a famous passenger liner in her peacetime days," Power went on. "She'd taken quite a beating during her service at Crete and elsewhere in the Mediterranean, and the long voyage through the Suez canal, around Africa and across the Atlantic with a fraction of her normal complement hadn't improved her any.

"But, taking into consideration the shortage of shipping, apparently she was all the admiralty had readily available at the moment. To make matters worse, bad weather on our east coast kept the ship from entering dock, where she could be cleaned in the usual way."

He concluded with assurances there would be no recurrence of the incident.

2 PREVENT WOMAN FROM ENDING LIFE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Mrs. Anna Murray, 37, called a girlhood friend on the telephone yesterday and said, "I am calling you to say goodbye. I am tired of living."

The friend, Mrs. Marie Boyd, summoned her husband, Matthew, a city fireman.

While Boyd raced four blocks to Mrs. Murray's home, Mrs. Boyd held her friend in conversation. But in a few moments the phone clicked off.

At the Murray home, Boyd broke a window and crawled into the kitchen to find Mrs. Murray unconscious and gas pouring from open stove jets.

He dragged her into the yard and two motor policemen rushed her to a hospital. Physicians reported she would recover.

Mrs. Boyd said Mrs. Murray, whose husband was away, had been ill.

L. S. U. ALUMNI TO MEET OCTOBER 7

All Louisiana State University alumni and former students are urged to attend a meeting called for the student social center at Northeast Junior College, Tuesday, October 7, at 8 p.m. The meeting had been originally announced for this week but a conflict of dates has caused the necessity of postponing until October 7.

President B. S. Hamner of the Ouachita parish chapter has issued the call for the meeting.

Several free tickets to L. S. U. football games will be awarded at the meeting and a large attendance is being sought.

JAPS LOSE 20,000 IN CHANGSHA DRIVE

CHUNGKING, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The Japanese have lost at least 20,000 men out of the 80,000 with which they launched their drive for Changsha, and the Hunan province capital still is in Chinese hands, an army spokesman declared this afternoon.

(The Japanese army announced at Shanghai Saturday that Changsha had been captured after hand-to-hand fighting and has reported since that the attacking forces have pushed through the city and about 22 miles further south.)

The battle for Changsha still is raging in full fury, with the Japanese being held about seven miles from its limits, the Chinese spokesman reported.

Pointing out the advantages of the Texas-Louisiana area in maneuvers, one military source here said that, with the exception of northern portions of the country which present special advantages in training troops for conflict in cold regions, this area is by far the most suitable of any in the United States for large-scale maneuvers.

Absence of a large number of industrial plants, the large tracts of farm and timber land, and the density and terrain in this area all are favorable to the holding of army troops, the source said.

These things, it was said, were largely responsible for the decision to hold the maneuvers here this year, as was the great strategic value of gaining experience in problems concerning the defense of the great oil and gas fields of the area.

The Louisiana-Texas area is probably more vulnerable to attack from the south than any other section, the source said, and its valuable fuel sources offer a rich prize to an invader. Experience in defense of the section it was said, is vital to the defense of the country.

Another factor which might logically enter into the selection of this area as a scene of maneuvers next year is the similarity of the climate and terrain problems of the area to those of nations and islands to the south.

Still another factor which probably will be worthy of consideration by next year's maneuvers area is the convenience of Louisiana and Texas as a "jumping off" basis for military actions in connection with defense of the southern part of the western hemisphere.

er" a labor newspaper, was "an instrument" of the Communist party, and the M. W. I. U. and that Bridges was an editor of the paper.

"I conclude," Sears went on to say, "that the aliens' [illegible] connection with the 'Waterfront Worker' demonstrates [illegible] with the M. W. I. U. and the Communist party, if not actual membership in either or both of these organizations."

Sears took stand in support of his findings the testimony of Harry Lundeberg, head of the A. F. L. Seafarers Union of the Pacific, given at a dinner party [illegible] participated in by Lundeberg, Bridges and others.

At this meeting, Sears report said, one of the group identified as Sam Darcy asked Lundeberg to join the Communist party and stated that Bridges was also a member of the Communist party.

The Lundeberg testimony, as quoted in the Sears report, was that Bridges spoke up and told Lundeberg:

"You don't have to be afraid because nobody has to know you are a member of the Communist party.

ONCE RODMAN, GETS HIGH POST

Robert White Becomes Chief Missouri Pacific Operating Officer

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 29.—(Special)—Robert C. White, who began railroad work 36 years ago as a rodman in a surveying crew, is to become chief operating officer of the Missouri Pacific railroad October 1, with direct supervision over its more than 20,000 employes engaged in train, engine, yard, station, engineering, maintenance and mechanical services.

The selection of Mr. White to succeed the late John Cannon was announced by L. W. Baldwin, head of the Missouri Pacific lines. At the same time it was announced that Mr. White would be succeeded as assistant general manager by W. F. Kirk, general superintendent of transportation for the system lines and that he would be succeeded by Earl Sullivan, superintendent of the Palestine-San Antonio division of the railroad's Texas lines.

Mr. White, who was born at Bertrand, Mo., and educated at the Southeast Missouri Teacher's College, the University of Missouri and the United States Military Academy, has held various important executive positions with the railroad. At the company's general offices here it was said his promotion was in recognition of his long and valuable service and because his past experiences made him especially well fitted for his new responsibilities.

After holding various positions in engineering crews he was made assistant division engineer at Sedalia and in 1907, just after his 26th birthday, he became the railroad's youngest roadmaster and a year later its youngest division engineer. He was promoted to district engineer with headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., in 1913 and superintendent of the Memphis division in 1917.

From July, 1917, to November, 1917, Mr. White served as engineer of construction for the war department in the building of a World war cantonment at Camp Pike, Ark., and during the period of federal control of railroads served as the railroad's assistant chief engineer. In January, 1921, he was promoted to general superintendent of the eastern district with headquarters at St. Louis and in 1924 was named system engineer maintenance of way, being promoted to the position of assistant general manager in March of the following year.

Mr. White gained considerable fame in railroad circles by the speed with which he rushed the construction work at Camp Pike and in 1927, when flood waters of the Mississippi and tributories swept over a large area served by the Missouri Pacific. During a large part of the two-month flood period he personally supervised the railroad's forces in evacuating refugees, carrying on relief work, repairing washouts and maintaining rail communications.

WILL PREACH TO DEAF ON FRIDAY

A special evening service for the deaf will be held in Grace Episcopal church Friday evening, October 3, at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Robert C. Fletcher, Episcopal missionary to the deaf in the southeastern states, is coming to Monroe especially for this event. Services have been held here in the past, and have proved beneficial spiritually to the deaf, who are denied full participation in the ordinary church service of worship. Mr. Fletcher preaches in the sign language.

His will be a general service to which all denominations are invited regardless of church affiliation. Mr. Fletcher is from Birmingham, Ala. Being deaf himself, he has had wide experience in this type of work.

The United States will manufacture more food products this year than any nation has produced in history, according to a report from grocery manufacturers.

METAL MINERS TOLD SAFETY AIDS DEFENSE

Convention Speaker Says Accidents Cause Huge Loss Of Man Hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—(AP)—James K. Richardson, safety director for the Climax Molybdenum Company, told American metal miners today that great gains could be made in their efforts to increase defense production through a carefully planned program of industrial accident prevention.

Richardson spoke at the opening session of the American Mining Congress' eighth annual metal mining convention, which has brought 2,000 leaders of the industry here to determine how their resources and productive capacities can best be applied to emergency needs.

Man-hours lost, directly and indirectly, as a result of industrial accidents last year, could have produced 15,000 to 18,000 heavy bombers, 30,000 medium bombers, 75,000 to 90,000 fighter planes, 112,500 to 225,000 training planes, depending on type, 450 submarines, 375 destroyers and 45 battleships, Richardson said in his prepared address.

"Did mining contribute to this loss?" he asked.

"I can only point out to you that figures compiled by the National Safety Council show that mining had, in 1940, the highest severity rate of 31 industries listed. . . .

"When the average American citizen thinks of defense industry, he thinks of the manufacturer producing planes, tanks, rifles, ammunition and other items in fabricated form.

"Sight is lost of the fact that mining is the basic industry where the steel for tanks and rifles originates; the origin of aluminum for our planes, the copper for our shell casings and ignition systems; the molybdenum, tungsten, nickel, vanadium and manganese so essential for proper strengthening of the steels; the lead and zinc vital throughout in the production of armament material. . . .

"Consequently the safeguarding of key men in mining is as vital to national defense as protecting the steel fabricator or machinist."

Before the convention closes Thursday night, close attention probably will be given the question of priorities and their effect on the supply of mining equipment and replacement parts.

"If supplies cannot be procured," said Julian D. Conover, secretary of the congress, "then the production of metals essential for armament cannot be furnished in the quantity needed. This will be a chief consideration in discussions."

HOBO KING CLAIMANT IN ARMY OF CANADA

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 29.—(AP)—Not that it ever mattered much but one thing was settled today with seeming finality—the question of who was the king of United States hoboes.

For a long time, Jeff Davis and J. Leon Lazarowitz have been arguing about that between themselves.

Saturday, J. Leon was sworn in as a soldier in the Canadian army. That would seem to leave the field of hobo king solely to Davis and the rambling Hobo Fellowship of America, which was what Lazarowitz so tenderly called his organization, without a president.

Lazarowitz, it was disclosed Sunday, recently applied to the recruiting center here after having been given an "A" medical rating in a test at Gretna, Man. He was accepted.

Why he joined the army, whether the business of hobo kinging was running down, etc., were questions that of the moment were anybody's guess and that was what Lazarowitz was letting anyone interested do—guess.

INDEPENDENCE OF SYRIA PROCLAIMED

DAMASCUS, Syria, Sept. 27.—(Delayed)—(AP)—General Georges Catroux commander of the Free French armies in the Levant, today formally proclaimed the independence of Syria in a ceremony at the government house.

Referring to the British and Free French manifesto of June 8 guaranteeing Syrian independence under a treaty to be concluded later, he said the declaration was rendered effective by restoration of the republic.

He declared the Syrian state enjoys from now on duties and prerogatives "attached to an independent sovereign state but these rights are subjected to restrictions imposed by the present state of war and the security of the territory."

BODY OF MISSING SAILOR RECOVERED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Recovery of the body of William Kirby Smith, one of three sailors missing since the forced landing of a patrol bomber in the Caribbean, was reported today to the navy department.

The plane made a forced landing September 25 near the island of St. Eustatius. The others missing were listed as D. F. Arture and Antonio Grillasca.

ONCE WEALTHIEST CANADIAN EXPIRES

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Sir Herbert Samuel Holt, 85, Canadian financier once reputed to be the wealthiest man in the Dominion, died yesterday.

Sir Herbert and his associates at various times were said to have controlled 250 companies with total assets of more than $2,000,000,000.

He was knighted for his World War service to Britain in which he outlined a system of light railways to haul supplies and ammunition and help the government with its railroad problems.

The first air mail letter, sent to Benjamin Franklin when he was living in France in 1785 was carried in a balloon across the English channel.
